RIMMER TO BEGIN HIS MEETINGS

Exponent of Militant Christianity and Former Fighter Here

HALF HOUR SERVICES

Former Pacific Coast Champion Conducted Mission

Harry Rimmer, who is a very red-blooded man, the exponent of a militant Christianity, and an ex-prizefighter, is today beginning in the Christian Church a series of meetings for all the young people of the city. Every afternoon this week he will meet young people of the high school for a half hour service beginning at 4 o'clock, but his principal meetings will be held in the evening at 7:30. As a prize fighter he held the Pacific Coast championship. After his conversion he gave up this mode of life to conduct a mission on the Barbary Coast of San Francisco, and also started missions among the lumber jacks in the northwest. Often to enlist their interest and respect he had to arrange for a prizefight and defeat the champion of the camp. On these mission tours he always took along his boxing gloves.

Mr. Rimmer besides being a great Y. M. C. A. leader, is in demand by other organizations. Last year he was engaged by Rotary International and for five weeks gave his entire time to speaking before Rotary clubs.

This week a number of Hi Y clubs from surrounding towns will attend the meetings. While they are primarily for young people, the general public is invited.

Harry Marple has charge of the music for the services this week, and has arranged a fine program. The calendar for the week runs as follows:

Tonight: Address by Mr. Rimmer on "The Unseen Sovereign." Ivan Dow will play a cornet selection and Mrs. Fannie Marple Retts will sing a gospel hymn.

Tuesday: "The Highest Trail" will be Mr. Rimmer's theme. Mrs. Floyd Mercer will sing a gospel solo and a young men's quartet from a colored Hi Y will sing.

Wednesday: Mr. Rimmer will talk on "The Human Speck." Herbert Bruck will play a violin number and the male quartet of the First Methodist church of this city will sing.

Thursday: "The Path to Success" will be the theme of the speaker. Herbert Bruck will play and Miss Arnold will sing.

Friday: "Dynamite" will be Mr. Rimmer's subject. Mrs. Retts will sing and numbers will be given by the Burbank Trio of violin, cello and piano.

Saturday night Mr. Rimmer will talk to Y. M. C. A. leaders.

Sunday night there will be a union meeting of all the young people's societies of Glendale churches at 6:15 and Mr. Rimmer will talk on "The Unbaptized Arm." Miss Arnold and Miss Esther Gleiss will sing.

ANOTHER CHILD IS ATTACKED BY DOG

Little Ruth Stein of East Broadway Is Bitten Saturday

Little Ruth Stein, the young daughter of Mrs. Charles Stein, 1214 East Broadway, was bitten Saturday by what Mrs. Stein believes to be a rabid dog. The attack on the child took place at the corner of Broadway and Adams street. She was taken at once to Health Officer Dr. Kaemmerling for treatment.

Mrs. Stein states that she would be able to identify two dogs that were to her knowledge bitten by the rabid dog.

BOY! PAGE MR. HOLMES!

A hypodermic needle in which diphtheria anti-toxin or serum had been used was found by Mrs. T. E. Anderton, 911 Cypress street, in the vacant lot between the Brand department store and the drug store at the corner of Brand and California. The needle was turned over to the Glendale police.

The plot deepens! The big question is—By whom, when and where was the needle wielder?

Our Peacock Reaches Olean, N. Y., and Is Noticed in Newspaper

The fame of Glendale's peacock has reached Olean, N. Y., through the boosting of Robert A. Sullivan, who sent a copy of the January 2 edition of the Glendale Daily Press to his favorite old home paper, the Olean Evening Herald.

The Herald, using the facts of the Press, told of the huge Glendale peacock, which won the prize for the fifth time at the Tournament of Roses, and, concluding, noted:

"Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Sullivan have been residents of Glendale for several years. They lived formerly at Boardmanville. Other easterners living in Glendale are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kearne of Ceres and Olean and Mrs. Jennie Olds."

T. D. & L. POLICY IS UNCHANGED

Recent Story Is Explained in Full by Local Manager

RALPH ALLAN STAYS

Personnel of the Popular Playhouse to Continue in Charge

"Announcement several days ago to the effect that the West Coast Theatres Inc. had purchased outright the T., D. & L. circuit of theatres, including theatres in Southern California, with the T., D. & L. theatre of Glendale as one of this string of houses, was not clear to the readers of the Glendale Daily Press," said Manager Ralph Allan, today.

"The facts of the matter are: That the West Coast theatres Inc. holds an option to purchase the Turner & Dahnken interests in northern California and New York State, including theatres in northern California as well as franchises for First National pictures and educational pictures for both northern California and New York state. This deal, however, has not as yet been consumnated. The effect that this purchase will have on the T., D. & L. Theatre circuit of Southern California, of which the T., D. & L. Theatre of Glendale is one, is quite a different angle.

"Should the deal of proposed purchase be concluded the interests of Turner & Dahnken in the Turner, Dahnken & Langly circuit will revert to the West Coast Theatres Inc. But Mr. C. L. Langley, executive head of the T., D. & L. Theatre circuit will retain a one-half interest in the T., D. & L. chain of playhouses and remain with this organization's chief executive. The status of the T., D. & L. Theatre remains therefore unchanged and the policy of the houses under the management of C. L. Langly will continue as in the past.

"There will be no changes whatsoever in the personnel of any of the T., D. & L. Theatres. C. L. Langly makes this announcement."

Ralph Allan, directly responsible to Mr. Langly, remains the resident manager at Glendale and will continue his policies of "best entertainment—big pictures," which he has so long fostered and put into effect at the popular playhouse where his effective and appreciative efforts have gained for him the goodwill of everybody in town. So regardless of whether the option held by West Coast Theatres Inc. for the purchase of the Turner & Dahnken interests is exercised or not the T., D. & L. Theatre of Glendale will continue as in the past.

SPUR TRACK ON OLD SITE IS UNDER REMOVAL

The Pacific Electric company started this morning to remove its spur track, that branched from the Broadway extension along the rear of the old Pacific Electric depot. The intention of the company is to tear out this track to a point about two-thirds the way from Broadway up to Wilson. Access to the company's freight depot will be gained via the spur from the P. E. main line on Brand boulevard near Wilson.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the $25 dinner to be given at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the chamber of commerce banquet room for the benefit of the Glendale Community Service budget fund are busy interviewing additional people in regard to reservations. A big crowd is anticipated. In addition to the list of reservations published in the Glendale Press of last Saturday, reservations have been made by Jesse E. Smith, C. W. Ingledue, Acacia Avenue school, Pacific Avenue Parent-Teacher association, Mrs. Nanno Woods of the Community Service Players and the Glendale Advancement association, according to George B. Karr.

Mr. Karr states that the subscription committee has been unable to personally interview all interested in the Community Service program for Glendale to secure their reservations for this dinner, but wishes everyone to feel that they have an invitation and that sufficient covers will be laid to provide for all who wish to attend.

GLENDALE OWNERS RECOVER THEIR STOLEN CARS

All Machines Taken in Last Few Weeks to Be Returned

All of the automobiles stolen in Glendale during the past few weeks have either been located here or have been accounted for elsewhere, according to a statement issued by Chief of Police Fraser this morning. The latest car recovered was that of Ira Calvin Enoch, which was located by Sergeant Kerns, Saturday night. It has been turned over to its rightful owner.

In connection with stolen cars, word has been received from Deputy Sheriff La Barrow of Blythe, Calif., to the effect that Richard Goble has just been arrested at that place. At the time the arrest was made he had in his possession a car which belongs to W. J. Curren of 379 West Patterson street, Glendale. The car will be returned to Glendale at once.

PIONEER NOTCHERS HOLD HIKE WITH REX KELLEY

The Pioneer Notcher Club made up of boys from Glendale and Burbank, had an exceptional hike Saturday, which was personally conducted by Secretary Rex Kelley of Glendale, and two of the Burbank Y. M. C. A. leaders, E. V. Thomas, principal of the Burbank Junior High, and T. E. Stevenson.

The party left here about 9 o'clock and went first to the Cawston Ostrich farm, where a guide led them and told them many interesting things about the great birds, for instance—that they mate once and for life. If the mate dies, they do not mate again, believing neither in polygamy nor divorce.

From the ostrich farm they went to the Southwest Museum where they inspected with great interest the large Indian exhibit from Catalina. Many of the boys who camped at Catalina last summer had themselves collected Indian relics there. They were also entertained with a program in which an Indian sang, and a lecture was given which was illustrated with moving pictures. Rocky Mountain scenes were shown and Rocky Mountain birds.

From the museum they went to the Strickland Home and had a ball game, getting back here about 3:30 o'clock.

GLENDALE TEAM DEFEATS TAXI CLUB OF L. A.

Heidler Strikes Out 12 Batsmen and Allows Five Hits

The Glendale Indians annexed another victory, Sunday, at the expense of the strong Yellow Taxi club of Los Angeles. The local boys are improving rapidly, and will prove to be a hard club to beat hereafter.

The honors of the day again go to Walter Heidler, the demon fast ball artist of the Indians, who struck out 12 batsmen and only allowed the opponents 5 hits, while the hitting of Harris and the fielding of Wilson both helped to put Glendale out in front.

The manager wishes to have all the Glendale players present at the meeting to be held at the Sport Shop Wednesday evening at 7:30, as there are several important matters to be discussed.

Miss Jane Snyder and Miss Person, members of the clerical force of the office at Glendale high are very busy today preparing individual programs for incoming students based on the general program prepared by vice principals Mrs. George U. HI OFFICIALS TO DINE WITH SCHOOL ARCHITECTS

Trustees and Principal Moyse to Be Guests in Los Angeles

Architects John C. Austin, Frederick Ashley and George M. Lindsey, who have prepared the plans and specifications for the new high school plant at Broadway and Verdugo, have invited members of the board of trustees and Principal George U. Moyse to dine with them at the Jonathan club in Los Angeles, Tuesday evening. Mr. Austin expects that all the men to whom contracts have been awarded will be ready to sign up that evening. Mr. Lindsey, who is the Glendale man of the trio of architects, will have general supervision of the work here.

Mr. Moyse expects to put in two days of careful checking on the electrical work and program clock system of the new school, preliminary to a revision of the specifications so the board can advertise for new bids with the least possible delay.

Just as soon as work begins the electrical contractor should be on the job to supervise the putting in of the plates that will go through the various outside walls in connection with the conduits for electric wires. It is therefore important that the specifications should be worked out as quickly as possible and bids be secured.

AUTO WRECKS STORE FRONT ON SO. BRAND

Mechanism Goes Wrong and Car Veers Into Jensen's Bakery

DRIVER IS UNINJURED

Dr. T. C. Young Orders Scene Roped Off to Prevent Damage

An automobile belonging to Dr. T. C. Young and driven by Charles Psenner of 409 South Glendale avenue, tried to tunnel the brick store building in the 500 block on South Brand, in which the Smith grocery and the Jensen bakery are located, at about 7:15 o'clock Sunday night.

For some reason the car became unmanageable, climbed the curbing and crashed into the front of the store. It smashed one of the building supports, broke several plate glass windows and damaged the goods in the stores to considerable extent.

Dr. Young was notified and went at once to the scene of the accident. Before leaving he ordered the front of the building roped off so that no one should be hurt by the bricks that might fall. The automobile was badly damaged. Except for a good shaking up, Psenner was not injured.

SERGEANT NUNN CAPTURES BAD EX-CONVICT

Finds Man Violating Parole in Car That Had Been stolen

The Glendale police department scored another "beat" when at 7 o'clock Sunday morning Patrolman Sergeant Nunn picked up Fred Anderson, 39 years old, who a short time ago violated his parole at San Quentin, according to police records, where he was given a ten-year sentence in connection with a grand larceny charge. In company with Anderson was Carl Westervelt, aged 16 years, of Mastier, Province of Ontario, Canada.

At the time Anderson and the boy were arrested they were riding in a car that had been stolen from J. F. P. Leiper of Modesto, Calif. The police declare that Anderson admitted to them that he had stolen the machine from eLiper.

The attitude of Anderson is one of bravado. He boasts of getting away from officers and of stealing automobiles at different parts of the country, according to the police, who state that this man is a second-termer and a bad actor. Anderson has been locked in station No. 1 and Westervelt is in station No. 2.

By trade, Anderson is a waiter and is a native of Indiana. After serving a portion of his ten-year term for grand larceny he was paroled on August 13, 1921.

BURGLARS LOOT HOME OF T. M. SMITH

Jewelry Is Stolen Saturday Evening While Family Is Out

The home of T. M. Smith, 1028 North Louise street was entered and robbed between 3:30 and 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening and a quantity of jewelry was taken. Entrance was gained to the home by way of a side window. The theft was not discovered until 11:05 p. m., when it was reported to the police. Officers went to the Smith home and made a thorough investigation, but as the theft had been committed hours before they had little chance of apprehending the thief.

The articles of jewelry taken, according to Mr. Smith, included the following: Two ladies' rings, one with large Tiffany setting, one diamond ring with old-fashioned setting, gentleman's stick pin, one old-fashioned pin with 6 or 7 diamonds, 1 garnet ring, two 50-cent pieces (Columbian exposition) and several other coins.

CLINTON BOOTH HOME ROBBED SUNDAY

Well Dressed Young Men Leave Residence As Family Arrives

The home of Clinton Booth, 123 West Lomita, was entered and robbed about the middle of Sunday afternoon by two well-dressed young men and a number of trinkets and keepsakes were taken. Mrs. Booth and daughter, Josephine, returned home about three o'clock. They drove up the drive and into the garage. A moment later they saw the young men leave the home via the rear door, through which they doubtless had entered. Thinking that probably the young men had been talking with Mr. Booth in the home, they did not consider the incident seriously at that time. However, when they entered the home they discovered the theft.

The body of H. E. Gordon, aged 65 years, was found at the home he had been occupying at 1042 Justin street, Saturday morning by Delos Jones, a plumbing inspector of the city of Glendale. Mr. Gordon, it is believed, had been dead for three or four days.

BOY SCOUTS RIDE WITH FIRE CHIEF

With Siren Shrieking, the Chief Takes Youths on Wild Ride

FRANCE HENRY, HOST

Chief Lankford Tells How Much Is Lost in Blazes During Year

With sirens shrieking and bells clanging, Glendale's fire department came charging down Broadway and Brand boulevard Saturday morning with Boy Scouts hanging on for dear life and hollering their heads off.

The cause of all this hilarity was due to the fact that all the Boy Scouts of the Verdugo Hills district had been invited to be the guests of Fire Chief A. H. Lankford, and long before the appointed time more than one hundred scouts had stormed the Broadway fire station in anticipation of seeing the big engines in action and hearing the "chief" talk.

A very pleasant and unsuspecting surprise was given the scouts when Chief Lankford told them that Francis Henry of the Henry-Brown company had invited the whole crowd of them up to the place where they make the famous Sierra Club ginger ale and that everyone was to be given a bottle of delicious beverage.

Tnere was no stopping the uproar following this announcement and the scouts piled on the big fire trucks and speeded away to the beverage plant on East Wilson street. There is no mistaking the attitude of the boys—France Henry was certainly a very popular man, and the cheers that they gave him amply repaid for his generous treat.

The scouts returned to the fire station where they were shown all through the building and how the apparatus worked. One of the most popular things in the station was the speed pole which is used by the firemen when they are in a hurry. The scouts had a great time sliding down this pole.

Chief Lankford gave a very interesting and educational talk on fighting fires, the use of special apparatus, including the lungmotor and smoke helmet, and also the prevention of fires.

"More than $500,000,000 worth of damage was done by fire alone last year," he stated, "and 15,000 people were burned to death and over 16,000 more were seriously injured because of the fires.

"Boy Scouts throughout the nation and particularly in California, are doing a great work in the prevention of fires," he added. "And Boy Scout auxiliary fire departments are being organized in every city in the state. We hope to have one organized in Glendale before many more moons."

Chief Langford showed the scouts how the big 120 horse-power motors work stating that they have a capacity of 750 gallons of water per minute at a steady pressure of 190 pounds. "The cost of one engine alone was $12,950," he said.

In bringing his talk to a close Chief Lankford told the scouts that he and his department would do anything they could for them and reminded the scouts that the members of the fire department are all their friends and that they were welcome at all times.

At the conclusion of Chief Lankford's talk, rousing cheers were given him and the firemen by a grateful and hilarious army of boys. "It was a great event in the lives of the scouts and it will be a long time before they forget the ride on the fire engines," declared Scout Executive Harold Benner.

Eagle Scout Herbert Packard, who is the "Chief" of the Pasadena Boy Scout fire auxiliary, was one of those present.

BACCALAUREATE ADVICE GIVEN BY REV. COLE

Admonition Contains Practical Thoughts for the Young Student

"Be not content to just get by" was the admonition contained in the very practical baccalaureate sermon preached by Rev. Clifford Cole in the Christian church, Sunday night, for the young people who are to be graduated from Glendale high next Thursday evening. The scripture reading which supplied the text was from the fifth chapter of the Gospel by Mathew, verses 38 to 48, wherein Christ exhorted His disciples to do more than the law and courtesy required—if smitten on one cheek to turn the other, if sued for a coat to give also a cloak, if compelled to go one mile to go twain, and lastly "Love your enemies, for if ye love them which love you, what reward have you? Do not even the publicans the same?"

The preacher expressed his appreciation of the presence of so many young people, and the intense interest of himself and his church in education, saying that he felt it a privilege to bring to these young people a special message.

He told the story of the young king who visited an aged prophet who was dying and asked of him a prophecy concerning the approaching Syrian army, his enemies. The prophet told him to smite the ground with his arrow. The king did three times. When he had done this the prophet said: "Had you smitten the ground five times you would have completely overcome them." The king the preacher took as one of the types of men who are content to "just get by," to just do their duty and no more. Over against them he contrasted the "fanatics" who when three blows are considered enough strike five or six times for good measure.

As men who just get by he cited the drivers of sharp bargains on the ragged edge of moral rectitude, the laborers continually keeping down the output, the students who are content to barely pass.

"Men say," he declared, "the Christian religion is negative because it has so many prohibitions. But we need placards somewhere in life to warn us 'Thou shalt not.' I have seen a chart of the ocean and places where ships may go but the whole emphasis is laid on the places where you may not sail. It is so in life. It is well to go far out to sea and avoid the shallows. In the world today there is a tendency to forsake the safe channels of life for the sake of experience or excitement. If you want to find out what a light house is for, you can, of course, go ahead and go to pieces on the rocks.

"These things that have been wrought out by experience are prohibitions that we need but no power can make a man observe them if he desires to just get by and clip the corners. He pays the penalty nevertheless. These prohibitions stand for the experience of others. They save us from the shipwreck we will surely find at the end of broken laws.

"The Christian religion has a life saving and salvage department that will undertake to get you off the rocks and send you out to sea again, but the main thing in Christian religion is prevention. An ounce of generating is of far more value than a pound of regenerating or patching up a broken life. Christianity is a religion that counsels you to give a wide berth to many vices of life. I have seen a few great souls in my life and none seemed to find it necessary to sail anywhere but in deep water.

"Christianity means leading the life into the deeper channels of human experience. These things made of Jesus such a remarkable teacher. He said: 'Except thy righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and pharisees, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.'"

The unprofitable servant who wrapped his talent in a napkin was given as an illustration of a man trying to "get by." "That,' said the preacher, "doesn't satisfy Christ. Christianity is doing the thing that is just a little bit more than duty, the thing that is not expected of one. It is the cup of cold water. It is doing with our lives and talents and money the things that are beyond the expectations of the people around us. We must not measure Christianity by the standards of the world. It is refreshing to find one whose goodness is not limited to what is expected and required. Goodness to him lies in the wide margin beyond the limit of the law. That is Christianity pure and undefiled.

"The necessary thing in a college education is not that we shall get something just for ourselves. Who pays for your education and mine? By what right do I use the education I get for myself alone? If you go to college, particularly a church college, even though you pay tuition, for every dollar you pay, some one else has paid $4. What right have you to accept it except for the glory of others and for the sake of humanity? That is what makes Christianity what it is.

"The greatest heresy in life is the heresy of merely 'getting by.' Let us not see how little we can do and be decent, but how much we can do. This world must be made over if our civilization is to continue. He is a Christian who is trying to make two blades of grass grow instead of one when one would have been acceptable.

"The essence of Christianity is doing the things not required. That is the perspective of life we need to think about.

"Young women, throw yourselves into the great questions of the time with a martyr's passion. Do not be content with merely 'getting by.' Do not be afraid to invest your life as God wishes it to be invested. Do not go out irresolutely. Better is it to say: 'Thank God that I was born in such a time as this. The times may be out of joint but I was born to help Him set them right.' If you save your life, as surely as God is in His heavens you will lose it.

"If you young men and women do not live for your own times as God intended, serving as He intended you to serve, it will be suicide for you. We are persuaded that better things are demanded of you. You are the product of a secular educational institution. You as graduates are its latest products. We expect better things of you, that you will live earnestly and in the spirit of consecration that the world may be better for your having lived in it."

RESPONSIBILITY OF CHURCHES IS DISCUSSED

Speaking at the public installation service Sunday morning at the First Lutheran Church Dr. Funk said:

"St. Paul, in his First letter to the Corinthians, writes, 'let a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.' The word ministers, as used here, is a sailor's term and refers to the oarsmen.

"Now when one oarsman breaks stroke the effect is disastrous, for the entire crew is thrown into disorder. The meaning is manifest, we must all pull together. Unity of faith is very essential, but unity of action is equally important. When divisions or differences of opinion arise we should withhold criticism and strive to work in harmony with the policy of the organization, if we would do constructive work, 'That there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and the same judgment.'

"No congregation has a moral right to break the unity of the church in its practical operations. Moreover, when a member of the church refuses or fails to participate in the common work of the church it is a declaration of separation. Activity is the law of life. The busy bee will not tolerate the presence of a drone. People who won't work are only a burden to the organization. On the other hand, by the united effort of a comparatively small company of believers working together in harmony, wonders may be accomplished.

"Alas, that any should ever neglect the means of grace. But some people do not want to be warned; they object to being advised as to what their duties are. The steamer 'Portland' left Boston Harbor in a storm in 1898. The government officer advised the captain not to go out, and the order was to stay in dock. Moreover the captain must have been apprehensive, for he said to the lighthouse keeper, 'Keep a bright light burning, for we may come back.' But they never came back, for they were caught in an awful storm, and all on board were lost. It was a sad wreck; but the saddest part is this—that they were all lost in the wreck because somebody refused to take orders from a superior. Many lives are wrecked in the church in a similar way, thereby becoming derelicts.

"More than fifty ships, known as derelicts are drifting on the highway of the seas. They have no compass by which to be guided, no one to give orders, no one to obey; they are drifting about the seas bearing no blessing, but instead have become a menace to others. In like manner human derelicts have refused to obey the voice of God, or, it may be, the authority of the church, which is the bride of Christ. 'Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it.'"

EVEN SCORE OF KIN WELCOME H. H. PETERS

Popular Illinois Pastor and Wife Visiting Glendale Relatives

Rev. Harry H. Peters and wife of Bloomington, Ill., arrived today for an extended visit in the Golden West. Rev. Peters has been a minister of the Christian church in Illinois for many years and has held several very important pastorates, one a church with 1600 members. For a few years past he has been field secretary for the Christian churches of Illinois and his duties have taken him into every part of the state and given him a wide acquaintance. So popular is he with the people in all walks of life with whom he has come in contact that a determined effort was made by his many admirers in 1920 to force him to become a candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket. But he much preferred his chosen work to bowing the knee to the corrupt political ring that dominates both of the major parties of the state, so refused.

Rev. Peters is a native-born Illinoisan and has spent all of his life thus for in the state of his birth. He is the father of two charming daughters, both now happily married. He and Mrs. Peters have long anticipated this trip to California, as they are anxious to compare the Southland with their native state.

They will visit Rev. Peters' twenty relatives now living in Glendale, namely; Mrs. Loretta Peters, his mother; James Edward and Robert, brothers; Mrs. L. Lindeman, Mrs. R. M. Lord and Mrs. Meade Powell, sisters; Mrs. Ray Cleveland, niece; together with the wives of the brothers, the husbands of the sisters and niece, and the children of those of the couples who are so blessed, making just a score in all. These, with Rev. and Mrs. Peters, expect to attend the church night supper at Central Christian church Wednesday evening and have reserved one table, with 22 places, for that occasion.

The twenty close relatives who have chosen Glendale as their permanent home are hoping that the two latest arrivals may be persuaded to settle down here also.

DR. WINNARD TELLS OF BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST

"Belshazzar's Feast," was the subject of the sermon by Dr. Winnard at the Tropico Presbyterian church last night. He used the fifth chapter of Daniel as a background for his sermon. He said in part:

"The first four verses of this chapter would not attract special attention if read in the society columns of any of our daily papers in these days. It is in the fifth verse that some strange thing happens. It is in this verse that God comes in. If God should come into some of our prayer-meetings we would count it a wondrous blessing, but should he come into some of our "gay parties" we would run for cover. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, and yet our God is a sun and a shield. No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly.

"He came as man's hand and wrote upon the wall. And the writing spelled disaster. Belshazzar was so scared that his knees smote together. He called for an interpreter. Here is where in this day the preacher gets his chance. But often as then it is too late. The final message had been written and that night was Belshazzar, the king of the Chaldeans slain. Profane history bears out this scriptural record to the very details.

"But this is more than an event in Babylonian history. It is an event that is being repeated day by day. The Feast of Belshazzar was doubtless a tame affair compared with some of the orgies of these days and nights, if half the papers tell of them are true. And His hand is writing now. And His word will be fulfilled and without Jesus 'the soul that sineth it shall die.'

"Belshazzar and his friends were doing nothing worse than defiling the sacred vessels of the temple with their profane lips, but there are those of today who are defiling the very 'temple of God, which temple ye are,' and sometimes God comes in. And who shall stand in His presence.

Belshazzar died drunk. He did not expect this, but God came in. The rich man was preparing to tear down his barns and build larger to store his abundant crops. But he did not need them, for God came in. This night opened with a feast. It closed with a funeral. It opened in debauch, it closed in death. It opened with shouts of revelry, it closed with hideous groans. It opened in pleasure, it closed in pain. It opened with praise, it closed with profanity. It opened with plenty, it closed with nothing. It opened without thought, it closed without hope. It opened on earth, it closed in hell.

"Friend, what of the first four verses of your life? And how will the fifth one read?"

"COMERCIALIZING RELIGION," REV. COLE'S TOPIC

Sunday's services at Central Christian church were marked with fine attendance. The Bible school session was enlivened with the giving of a challenge by the Men's class to that of the Loyal Women for a contest in membership and efficiency, to begin Sunday, February 4, and end Sunday, April 1, which was accepted.

The morning sermon subject was "Commercializing Religion" and Rev. Cole prefaced his remarks by reading the story of the evangelizing of Samaria, and Simon the sorcerer's request of Peter that he sell him the gift of the Holy Spirit. From this incident he drew a parallel—the effort of men today to buy their way into the kingdom by munificent gifts to religious institutions. The greatest money gift in the world cannot buy salvation. A humble and a contrite heart is necessary. There are many fads today that are drawing men's minds from the pure gospel of Jesus Christ — spiritualism, the ouija board, a persistent dwelling on pre-millenialism, and the like. All these draw people away from the real truth. Money cannot buy true friends any more than it can buy salvation. It takes thought, feeling, sympathy, to make and hold friends.

While the Master demands all that we have if we would become his true followers, yet there isn't enough property and money in the world to buy one moment of heaven.

TEMPLE OF MUSIC TO OPEN ON FEB. TENTH

Glendale Phonograph Co. to Have Formal Reception

"The Temple of Music," the new store of the Glendale Phonograph company, artistic Brunswick Shoppe, 123 South Brand, will open to the Glendale public about February 10.

Artist Schultz, who has personal charge of the decorating of this establishment, claims this will be one of the finest stores of its kind in Southern California. The Moorish design will be carried out throughout the entire place. There will be beautiful oil paintings on both walls to bring out the spirit of music. The color scheme will be blue, gold and red.

The various booths will be different in design and decoration. Those on the main floor will be Egyptian and Arabian in design. The mezzanine floor is to have two large booths in which Japanese and Egyptian designs are carried out. The fixtures are being installed by C. L. Jenkins. The idea of the management of this establishment is to make this a place that will prove a valuable addition to the business world of Glendale.

"This establishment is being created," said M. Lightner this morning, "to show the people of Glendale its patronage is being fully appreciated. Our firm is growing so rapidly that it is hard to keep up with this advance.

"As in the past the Glendale Phonograph company will in the future endeavor to increase its efficiency in serving the public. Our sales are not complete until the customer is perfectly satisfied."

Since taking hold of the business of the Glendale Phonograph company Mr. Lightner has done wonders in advancing the interests of the firm.

In the future this company will carry a full line of Brunswick phonographs and records, standard pianos and plays, musical instruments of every kind and sheet music. It will cater to the public's every need along the musical line.

MRS. BOLEN FINDS HOME GROUNDS IN MOVIE STORY

Mrs. John Bolen of this city had one of the surprises of her life when she, as hostess to a theater party at one of Sidney Franklin's previews, discovered the play was "Brass," and that some of the most beautiful scenes had been filmed in her own home grounds in Verdugo Woodlands. In the party were her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hendershot, Mr. and Mrs. Will McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Walker, Doris Walker, and the son of the hostess, Jack Bolen. The pictures were very beautiful and excited admiration, though not all the Glendalians in the audience recognized them as local scenes. Mrs. Bolen has been asked to lend her grounds again to photo players.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES TOLD BY A. W. SIBLEY

Evangelist Arthur W. Sibley, speaker in the Chamber of Commerce hall, Sunday evening, under the auspices of the International Bible Students associations, said in part:

"In dealing with the subject of the unmistakable evidences of the personal presence of Christ, we realize that we are dealing with the most important doctrine of the Bible; for the return of our Lord to the earth is the dawn of hope for the church and the world. Though most Christian people claim to believe in the second coming, they unite in putting the event a long way in the future, and failing to appreciate for what purpose our Lord is coming the second time, they are unable to recognize the evidence of His presence.

"When the Disciples asked our Lord concerning His second advent as recorded in Matthew the 24th chapter and Luke the 21st chapter, they did not inquire concerning His coming as our common version Bible gives it, but what they asked Him was: 'What shall be the sign (or evidence) of Thy presence? How shall we know that you are once more on this earth?' And it was this question that Jesus answered, giving us the evidence by which we might know that He was present.

"He said that, 'Nation would rise against nation,' and that there would be 'famine and pestilence and earthquakes in divers places.' 'Distress of nations with perplexity, men's hearts failing them for fear for looking after these things coming upon the earth.' And a 'time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation.'

"These signs and many more have been fulfilled, and Christ is now personally present, setting up His kingdom upon the ruins of the kingdoms of this world, many of which have already gone down in revolution and anarchy and all of which must go down to make way for the great kingdom of peace under Christ, the Prince of Peace.

"It is not only true that millions now living will never die, but that very soon, about 1925, the millions now dead will begin to come back from the death state, to receive the great blessing of life, liberty and happiness under the glorious reign of righteousness—"restitution spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.'"

"DAD" RAVENSCROFT IS VERY ILL AT HOSPITAL

Sorrow is in the hearts of the Masons of Glendale because "Dad" Ravenscroft, custodian of the Masonic Temple is very ill at the Research Hospital where he was taken Saturday. His trouble is believed to be Bright's disease. His daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Ellis of San Jose, was sent for and has reached her father's bedside. A man of very genial personality with a heart as big as his large body, no member of the local fraternity has been more beloved. All have known him well as he has acted as sentinel and warder in the various masonic bodies. He is an ex-railroad man and in his employment in that line learned to meet the world with a smiling face, his heart instead of hardening becoming mellow and sympathetic. Tributes of the good will and affection of his fellow Masons surround him at the hospital where no one save his nurses and members of his family are allowed to see him.

PRESBYTERIAN WEEK MARKED BY CHURCH

Distinguished Speakers to Attend Observations of Group of Men

This week is being observed as "Presbyterian Week" at the Glendale Presbyterian church according to the statement of Rev. Louis Tinning, the assistant pastor of the church. This evening the men of the "Presbyterian Week Group," which is made up of the trustees, deacons, elders and others, will gather at the church at a complimentary dinner at 6:30 to meet Dr. A. A. Fulton. Dr. Fulton has been a missionary to China for forty years but is now living in Highland Park. He achieved marvelous success as a teacher and educator as well as a gospel minister. The highest honors ever given to a missionary were bestowed upon him by the Chinese government. In the early days his house was burned over his head, he was stoned in the streets, and he was obliged to flee for his life. He relates a thrilling tale of his missionary experiences in China and he will speak to the men at the dinner tonight.

At 2:30 Tuesday afternoon Dr. R. N. McLean will address a large gathering of women at the church. He has charge of the work among the Mexicans in the five southwestern states. He is always a popular speaker and will come with a stirring message of what is being accomplished. This will be one of the largest gatherings of Presbyterian women ever held in Glendale.

On Wednesday evening at the prayer meting hour Dr. W. B. Allison, a missionary from Guatemala, will deliver an address. Dr. Allison has been in the Latin American countries for nearly twenty years and brings his own personal experiences. He will tell of answers to prayer in his work which seem almost beyond the power of human imagination to believe.

Thursday and Friday will be given up to special work. Next Sunday Dr. R. N. McLean will speak at both morning and evening services. At these services the needs of mission work will be presented and an appeal made for support. A large number of singers will be present at the evening service from one of the Mexican Presbyterian congregations in Los Angeles. The money to be raised will be used for two specific purposes, stated Rev. Tinning. First, to carry on additional work among the Mexican people in Southern California. And also for the support of a missionary by the Glendale congregation in the foreign field. To carry out this great program it will be necessary to raise at least three thousand dollars in addition to money raised for all other purposes. This program has received the official endorsement of the official boards of the congregation. It is expected that the proposed plan will be easily carried out as the local congregation has always backed up financially all the plans presented and approved by the church boards.

Much interest has already been shown in the plans proposed. Several men in the congregation have already voluntarily promised to assume generous sums for the support of the proposed work. The pastors of the church are both confident that the results of the observance of "Presbyterian Week" will stimulate all branches of the local work to still greater interest and activity.

'PRAYER WARRIOR' IS REV. EDMONDS' SUBJECT

Dr. W. E. Edmonds spoke Sunday morning on the "Prayer Warrior," at the Glendale Presbyterian Church. He said that in recent years nations called their men to warfare and great was the response. God is also calling men for warfare, to advance on their knees, to go forth, not to die, but to live and to live that others may live.

"Prayer is commerce with heaven—we need what God has and what he wants us to have," he said. "We obtain only when we are in right relation to God through Jesus Christ. We should be as definite in our requests from God as we are when we buy goods from a merchant. When our desires are fervent and keen the prayer life is no longer barren. It is possible to be in right relationship to God even if there are imperfections in the life. Believing prayer is the secret of release of God's power into the needs of heart and life. There are many hindrances to prayer. We have an adversary who will wear us out if he can. We must wear him out through prayer."

Mrs. Hunter of 628 West Alexander street, has returned from a several days' visit at Inglewood.

REV. SWANEY IS PREACHER SUNDAY

Rev. L. E. Swaney of Tujunga was the preacher at the Nazarene Church on Sunday. Rev. Swaney is a southerner and is quite well known in Southern California. His sermon Sunday night was about the consequences that come to those who disobey the call of God. At the close of the sermon three persons came forward and knelt at the altar and surrendered to God.

The regular Tuesday evening prayer meeting will be held at the church on Glendale avenue and those who are praying for an old-time revival in Glendale are invited to come to this prayer meeting.

The announcement of next Sunday's services will be made later on in the week. Watch for it.

HYDRATION STATISTICS

The Fruit Products laboratory of the University of California is gathering information from dehydrator owners in order to determine the total tonnage of each kind of fruit and vegetables dehydrated in the state for the season of 1922.

A blank has been sent to each dehydrator owner in the state on which to report the information desired. In order to make the statistics complete and reliable, it is essential that every dehydrator operator cooperate in reporting the tonnage dehydrated by him, including custom dehydration for others.

The dehydration of fruits and vegetables is a rapidly growing industry in California. In 1921 the university began the annual compilation of statistics on the industry and the data secured have proved of so much value and interest that in the absence of any other organization the university has decided to gather figures again for the season just closed.

AT THE THEATRES

"A FOOL THERE WAS" AT GLENDALE THEATER

When Rudyard Kipling wrote "The Vampire" he little thought that it would some day be the theme of a great photoplay, but "A Fool There Was," the 1922 version of that famous play by Porter Emerson Browne had it's opening here yesterday at the Glendale theatre, and scored a popular hit, an entirely new version produced by William Fox, with Estelle Taylor and Lewis S. Stone. Almost everyone has at one time or other read Kipling's poetic description of the woman who stript men of their wealth and honor and then cast them aside, but Estelle Taylor's screen version of the Vampire surpasses anything in that line heretofore done on the silver sheet.

The great financial power of Wall street sneered contemptuously when he saw a young man commit suicide over the vampire as he was about to sail for Europe, and he little thought that he would soon sacrifice his own family, friends and honor for this fascinating woman. However, he succumbed to her charms and soon found himself in a web from which he could not escape.

Lewis S. Stone gives a remarkable portrayal of the fool, that can be characterized as one of the best things that he has done. The scenes in which the fool is shown trying to break away from the entrancing woman who holds him like a spell are exceptionally good.

The work of the supporting cast is excellent, and the picture has many wonderful interior scenes. Irene Rich, Muriel Frances Dana, Marjorie Daw, Mahlon Hamilton, Wallace McDonald, William V. Mong and Harry Lonsdale are the others who make up the cast.

Harold Lloyd in his latest comedy "Dr. Jack," is the "big show" at the T. D. and L. theatre, starting today. Hardly any further announcement seems necessary—however Ralph Allan gives out this morning, "If you have any troubles, no matter what, consult Dr. Jack. He'll prescribe his laughter tonic which is the best thing in the world and cures all ailments of no matter what character. If you are looking just for a good laugh you get that too—plenty of it and go away with the whole world looking brighter and better and happier. Come early, attend the matinees. The T. D. and L. isn't going to be big enough to handle the crowds. Remember it starts today, but don't wait till the last minute—it might be too late and you won't be able to get in. But don't miss it— it is too good! Regular prices prevail. It's a great show! Nuf sed."

Ringside View of the Heavyweights

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Three former world's heavyweight champions and one who wants to be the next one were clustered in the glare of the ringside light in Madison Square Garden the night Floyd Johnson fought Bill Brennan.

It was a fight advertised as one to give a line on how near the youthful Johnson was to a chance for the title and all the experts and celebrities were there.

With Tex Rickard in the front row were James J. Corbett, the first champion of the Queensbury rules; Jess Willard, the biggest of all title holders, and Tommy Gibbons, in line for the title.

In the manner befitting a blase champion, Jack Dempsey was absent.

Back several rows where the glare of the arc lights over the ring began to melt into a black curtain sat Jack Johnson, the "Li'l Arthur" of days gone by, gold teeth and the whites of his eyeballs sticking through the darkness.

Across the ring on the other side, visible only because he was taller than the rest, sat Harry Wills, the brown panther of New Orleans, who will never be a world's champion because he will never get the chance.

In that scattered group was represented all the stages of pugilism; in them were exhibited all the degrees of enthusiasm, ambition, hope and realization.

Corbett, suave and dignified like the "Gentleman Jim" that he was always called, sat there unemotional, watching a young hopeful and an old veteran battle for the chance to get a title and the million that goes with it.

Corbett is gray at the temples and sparse locked on top. His forehead is deeply wrinkled and the telltale crow's feet crop out around his eyes when he laughs. His eyes are behind big horn-rimmed glasses. He looks like a bank president about to retire.

Corbett sat there with his arms crossed over his breast and the expressionless mask of a poker face on his countenance. Corbett's enthusiasm had dimmed. He had been through it all and the thrill was not there.

* * * * * * *

Next to him sat Jess Willard, the huge Kansas cowboy, rancher, oil man, sheep herder and speculator—also the man who took the worst beating that a champion ever got in a ring.

Willard looked good. His face, tanned by wind and sun, made his eyes look white and clear. His massive chest heaved under a blue silk shirt with collar to match and a neat gray suit. He twirled a big sombrero in his hands and squirmed around trying to get comfortable on a chair many sizes too small for him.

When the fight started, Big Jess moved his 300 pounds to the edge of the seat and the muscles in his face started. With every blow struck in the ring his eyes squinted, his jaw muscles throbbed, his mouth opened and his tongue would moisten his lips. He was not out of the game long enough to keep from having a little subconscious part in it himself.

* * * * * * *

Next to him sat Tommy Gibbons, the St. Paul boy, the classiest boxer among all the heavyweights. Gibbons was on the edge of his chair. When the gong sounded for a round, all his muscles tightened and his fists clenched. He blocked with his elbows, his shoulders moved like one with a serious nervous trouble. He ducked his head and swayed it around on his shoulders and his feet were constantly shifting. He almost breathed laboriously with the men in the ring when they began to tire.

His demeanor represented ambition, hope, enthusiasm and all their relatives.

* * * * * * *

Back of him, through the haze of darkness and smoke, beamed the golden smile of Jack Johnson. He was perfectly at ease. His bulk was so squeezed in between customers that he couldn't move if he wanted to and he only smiled, as he always did.

* * * * * * *

Over on the other side, his head on a stretched high neck to see it all, was the face of Harry Wills. He was putting a hunk of chewing gum to the greatest of torture. Otherwise he was just watching.

CHEESE MAKING

Much of the cheese made in California would be illegal if the much discussed moisture standard was put into force, so the University of California is to feature moisture control in its Short Course in Cheese Making which is to be given at the University Farm from February 5 to February 15.

H. R. Lochry, cheese specialist for the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is coming to California to cooperate with the Dairy Industry division of the University in this Short Course work. The new Dairy Industry building is fully equipped to take care of the daily manufacture of the various varieties of cheese. There are four cheese curing rooms with automatic temperature control in the new building.

The entrance requirements for the Short Course are, that a man be 18 years of age, have had some experience in cheese-making and a common school education.

An English lover of music was envying the Italian barber his musical heritage and his greater enjoyment of opera. "I suppose you Italians," he said, "can understand your singer perfectly?" The barber looked puzzled. "You can if you understand the words," he said.

SUPERINTENDENT WHITE OUTLINES COMING SEMESTER

To Open February 5; Legal Age Six Years; Facilities Told

The following announcement relative to the coming semester of the city schools, which is made by Superintendent Richardson D. White, should be of interest to parents because of the pertinent information it contains:

SECOND TERM OF SCHOOL

The second term of school will open on Monday, February 5, 1923. It is very important that every child should enter school on the first day and should thereafter be regular and punctual in his attendance. Any absence may be a serious menace to the child's standing in his classes.

Special Permits

Owing to the crowded condition of some of the schools it will be impossible to grant permits to attend school in a district other than that of residence with the same freedom as heretofore. Parents desiring such permits should apply at the superintendent's office during the week before school opens. No permits will be issued until the second day of the school term, at which time it will be possible to determine what conditions are. Parents are requested, therefore, even though they have applied for a permit, to send their children for the first two days of the term to the school in whose district they reside.

School Age

The legal age for entering school is six years. However, an allowance of three months is made. No greater allowance will be made under any circumstances. This means that in order to enter the first grade a child would have to be six on or before May 5, 1923. No beginner will be admitted after the close of the first month of the term.

Kindergartens

Kindergartens will be opened at the Columbus avenue, Colorado street, Broadway, Cerritos avenue, Pacific avenue, Central avenue, Acacia avenue, Doran street and Magnolia avenue schools. The law states the kindergarten age to be from four and one-half to six years. An allowance of three months is made in this case also. This law is interpreted to mean that the child's fourth birthday must have occurred at least three months before the opening of the term, i. e., in this case, on or before November 5, 1922. No allowance is made for over age. Any child who is six years old or older on the day the term begins will not be admitted to the kindergarten. Such child may, of course, enter school if the parents so desire. In order that the parents may have a choice between the kindergarten and the school, the child must be between five years and nine months and six years old on the day the term begins.

Parents are advised not to send their children to kindergarten until they are at least four years and nine months old, for the following reasons: First, we have a kindergarten course of only one year and if a child finishes that before he has attained to school age he will either have to drop out for a half year or take the same work over again in the kindergarten; second, a child of five will get much more out of the kindergarten work than a child of four and a half.

Superintendent's Office Hours

For any further information call up the superintendent's office between the hours of 9 and 5, except on Saturdays and Sundays. On Saturday call between 9 and 12.

Telephone, Glendale 593.

'LIVE AND HELP LIVE' SLOGAN OF BIBLE CLASS

Continuing the study of the second chapter of First Thessalonians, which has been called the Christian worker's mirror, Mr. Brooks called attention of the Men's Bible Class at the City Hall yesterday, to the words of the Apostle in verses 5 and 6, wherein he points out three peculiar temptations of the Gospel ministry. These three pitfalls which the Apostle Paul declared he had avoided are named as resort to flattery, the spirit of covetousness, and the desire for self-glory.

"There is no greater peril to Christ's witnesses than that of putting on the salve of flattery. There are many who are seeking the good opinion of some man or woman whose means or influence might solve some difficulties for them. The minister of the Gospel may find it easy to excuse himself for toning down his message for these reasons, but the Scriptures point out that whatever the purpose of flattery, it is no kindness and will not get one anywhere in the end. Solomon said, 'A man that flattereth his neighbor spreadeth a net for his feet.' The story is told of a supply preacher who was filling a new pulpit and was cautioned before the morning service, by the head deacon, that he should be careful not to say a word against dancing, for some of the members danced; nor against drinking, for one of the prominent members was a brewer; nor against card playing, for many of the prominent members were attending parties. The supply, in dismay, asked, 'What shall I preach against?' After a moment of thought, the deacon's face brightened and he said, 'Hit the Jews. There isn't one in our church.' Paul would not allow himself to be in bondage to a few influential pewholders. He would not tone down the Gospel or spread on the salve.

"With flattery very naturally goes covetousness. Worldly people sometimes charge that Christian workers are grafters. Usually such knockers have little reason to complain as they have never given anything to Christian work themselves. I knew of a brewer who wrote an article for the daily paper deploring the fact that poor people were giving money to the support of an evangelist. I would not say that covetousness is never found among Christian workers, but I do know that the definite kind of Christian work which was done by Christ and His Apostles never tempts anyone who wants to get rich. I heard recently of a minister whose wife awakened him in the night and told him there was a burglar in the house. He merely turned over and said, 'Let him find out his mistake for himself.' As for Paul, he took no chances on criticism along the line of covetousness. His own hands, coarse from the labor of tent-making, were proofs of his independence. While he teaches that the Gospel worker is worthy of his hire, yet he waived the right which he had to collect money for his support. His pay for witnessing for Christ was not counted up in gold, place or honor, but in stripes, stones, hunger, jail and slow martyrdom.

"The third pitfall mentioned is that of self-glory. Many fall prey to this desire for a name or position. They would keep about themselves an air of dignity and of importance. The apostles could have made much of their dignity and authority. Paul could have oppressed the Thessalonian Christians with the weight of his apostolic authority, but he sought none of this. Fenelon has said, 'I love a serious preacher who speaks for my sake and not his own, who seeks my upbuilding and not his own glory.' Is this not the kind of a preacher the great majority of men and women in these days want to hear?"

SELF EXPRESSION THROUGH MUSIC IS SOUGHT

Committee Meets to Adopt Resolutions on Purpose of Service

"To help each man, woman and child in the community to gain for himself or for herself the largest measure of self-expression through music," was adopted as the general purpose and background of the Community Service music program in Glendale at a meeting of the music committee of Glendale Community Service held Friday afternoon at the office of the chairman, A. L. Baird. At this meeting very definite plans were discussed for the carrying on of this particular activity. Alexander Stewart, Pacific coast music organizer for National Community Service, met with the committee, composed of P. J. Hayselden, Francis J. W. Henry, H. V. Henry, Captain D. Ripley Jackson, Mrs. W. A. Kulp, Alexander Mitchell, Mrs. Ella Richardson and Mrs. W. Q. Widdows.

1.—The Music committee to have full charge of outlining of policies, appointment of special committees to work out activities, to make budget for financing the various activities and other details in regard to the music work.

2.—All expenditures for the music work shall be approved by the executive committee of Glendale Community Service before final authorization.

3.—A full report of the activities of the music committee shall be made at least once a month to the executive committee of Glendale Community Service.

4.—Names of chairmen of special committees may be recommended by the chairman of the music committee but shall be submitted to the music committee for its approval.

5.—The following shall be adopted as the general purpose and the background of the music program in Glendale:

To help each man, woman and child in the community to gain for himself or for herself the largest measure of self-expression through music.

As stated by the chairman, it is the purpose through Community Music to weld people together as citizens so that they shall feel the common tie. It is the purpose to produce social solidarity, to use music to make people more willing to work for civic welfare in their city and through music to help the foreign-born citizen to share in the life of his neighborhood and become a part of it.

Why Needed

Men and women need opportunity to express deep and even violent feeling without the use of their own words. They crave group, racial and world forms of expression which have served men of like conditions in times of stress.

A singing nation—a musical nation—is a stronger nation for working, for national defense, for living. Men work better, and in better health, and are better comrades, better citizens when there is a song in the heart, and rhythm in their movement.

Leisure time must be served from waste in idleness and dissipation if the world is to progress. No single means of using leisure time has greater possibilities than music.

6.—The definite purposes of the music work in Glendale are outlined as follows:

"To stimulate co-operation between the musicians of the community in working out music plans.

"To stimulate co-operation between the business and non-professional musical interests and the professional interests and the professional musicians.

"Through such co-operation to encourage the recognition of music as a social and civic influence as well as a cultural force in the life of the community.

"To encourage the community at large to give better recognition to the work and service of its existing musical organizations and professional musicians.

"The initiate, and where deemed advisable, to promote a year-round program of special activities along the line of community music work which the existing organizations may not be in a position to undertake."

Mrs. Widdows gave a report on the first meeting of the Institute, which showed deep interest manifested.

The chairman appointed Captain Jackson and Mr. Stewart as a committee to look up the subject of song books.

Mr. Stewart and Capt. Jackson were appointed to look after the Music Rally dinner.

Mr. Stewart was authorized to take care of publicity campaign. Mr. Francis Henry on this committee.

Mrs. Kulp was appointed to look into the Music Memory contest.

A committee composed of Mr. Stewart, Mr. Orput and Mr. Baird appointed to look after the subject of financing music work.

"FAITH" REV. BARR'S SUBJECT AT THE M. E., SOUTH

A splendid congregation heard the pastor speak at the Broadway Methodist church at 2 o'clock Sunday on the subject, "Faith of our Fathers," Reverend Barr choosing for his text Psalm 78:5. He spoke in part as follows:

"God has given to every individual and every nation a task to perform for humanity and for God's kingdom; He has always appreciated seeing men undertake big propositions and He was with them in the undertaking.

"God was our Father in all things He undertook to do and His task of creation was a tremendous one.

"Abraham was our father in faith—he believed God and prepared to offer his son as an offering and a sacrifice unto God, but God prepared the sacrifice.

"Jacob's faith in God was indicated in his wrestling with the angel, and he would not let him go until he had received a blessing.

"God thus established a testimony in Jacob, and commanded our fathers that they teach the law to their children.

"Moses' faith resulted in Israel having the laws of God to govern them. He no doubt feeling the great responsibility, wanted help, and prayer on the Mount to God. He tarried before God and the people gathered their gold together and made a golden calf. This they were worshiping when he returned with the law of God.

"Moses struck the rock and water came forth. The people were without food and manna was sent from heaven. God caused the quails to fly into the camp and they had meat.

"David's faith in God and God's faith in David gave him victory over armies, over sin, for he sought God in his distress.

"Solomon's faith resulted in the building of possibly the greatest temple ever erected to God. He went to God for help, asking for wisdom, and God gave him wisdom, also riches.

"Isaiah saw the promise: 'Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. He shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips, shall he slay the wicked.' Isa. 11:4.

"Elijah saw the rain cease three years and six months, then prayed for rain and it fell. Joshua prayed that the sun and moon stand still till victory was his over the enemy, and they stood still for a day.

"Noah's faith saved his household; Daniel's faith saved him from the lions; the Hebrew children's faith saved them from the fiery furnace. Faith is the stronghold of man and God in a united effort."

The pastor announced that Bishop DuBose would preach next Sunday at 3 o'clock.

CENTRAL P.-T. A. MAKES SUCCESS OF FOOD SALE

The food sale conducted by the Central Avenue P.-T. A., on Saturday, netted $38, and everything had been sold by 12 o'clock. The proceeds will go towards the new phonograph for the school auditorium which the association is buying. Two committee chairmen are directing the project. Mrs. Dickerson is chairman of the committee which put on the food sale.

A LECTURE ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Christian Science: The Science of Being"

By

GEORGE SHAW COOK, C. S. B.

Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts
Delivered in First Church of Christ, Scientist, Glendale, California

Much is said and written about a proposed union or reunion of the churches. In several recent denominational conventions considerable time was devoted to discussion of a possible basis for church unity. To one who will give this question sufficient thought, it will become apparent that there is but one basis for real Christian unity, that basis being a common, demonstrable understanding that God is Truth, or Principle. This is the base upon which Jesus built his church, and "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid."

Christian Science has come to reveal that God is divine Principle, Love, and to show mankind that knowledge of God is demonstrable. Thus Christian Science is reinstating primitive Christianity, and re-establishing the teachings of the Master-Christian as demonstrated by him and by his early followers in the healing of sickness and sin.

In an audience of this kind there are, without doubt, those who entertain widely divergent views on the subjects of religion, of philosophy, of medicine. Some of those opinions are, doubtless, opposed to the teachings of Christian Science. I trust, however, that as this lecture proceeds we shall find that there are many points on which we can agree, and some points, at least, on which we are already in agreement. For example, we are all agreed that we exist. Everyone present admits, without argument, the fact of his conscious existence.

Since we are agreed that we exist we can easily proceed to the next point of agreement, viz: that there must be a cause for our existence. The premise of existence leads unavoidably to the conclusion that there is a cause for existence. We may, however, differ as to the nature of that cause.

Writing on the subject of causation Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer of Christian Science, says on page 544 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "man exists because God exists." And Jesus said, "Call no man your father upon the earth, for one is your father, which is in heaven." The Lord's prayer is addressed to "our Father which art in heaven," and at one time Jesus said, "I ascend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God."

SPIRITUAL CAUSATION

Causation, as understood by Jesus, and as taught by Christian Science, is spiritual. This spiritual cause is the one infinite, heavenly Father whom men call God. The scriptures not only declare God to be Father, but to be the Almighty, the Everlasting, I AM, Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, Christian Scientists accept these scriptural definitions of God without reservation, but they also think of God as being infinite good, as supreme intelligence, or Mind, the one self-existent and eternal Life, or Consciousness. God is thus seen as the only source, origin, cause, or creative Principle.

These scriptural and Christianly scientific synonyms for Deity give us a better understanding of the omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence of God.

From the standpoint of spiritual causation it is readily seen that creation must be spiritual, since effect must always be like cause. If God, the only creator, is Mind, or Spirit, then His creation must be mental, or spiritual. Since God is infinite Consciousness, or divine Mind, His universe must be a conscious universe. The office of Mind is to think, and the effect of thinking is thought; hence the universe of Mind is a universe of thought consisting of ideas which perfectly express their divine origin. The only real and enduring universe, then, existing in Mind, partakes of the exact nature of its Principle, or Creator. It, therefore, reflects all the divine attributes, including permanence, immortality, beauty, order, harmony, health, joy, peace, purity, perfection. The universe of Spirit is governed by absolute law, and is held forever in safety and security by the power that created it. This universe, being infinite and all-inclusive, lacks nothing—it is complete. All things in this universe are the expression of perfect Mind, or God, and for His pleasure "they are and were created."

MAN IS SPIRITUAL

The Scriptures tell us in the first chapter of Genesis that man was created in the image and after the likeness of God. A true likeness is that which perfectly expresses its original. If, therefore, man is created in the likeness of God, he must be exactly like his creator. If God is Spirit, man, in His likeness, must be spiritual. If God is Truth, man, as the image of God, must be truthful, honest, sincere. If God is Love, man, in his true nature, must be loving, gentle, kind, compassionate. If God is Life, man must be and is the living image of life. This man, the true man, the only real man, is not subject to chance nor change. He is as changeless as his eternal Principle. He is not the victim of lack nor of limitation. He reflects the infinite abundance of Spirit or God. He is not doomed to decrepitude and dissolution. He exists forever at the eternal noontide of being. He is always at the standpoint of limitless opportunity, activity, and supply.

In the second chapter of Genesis there is, however, an account of creation which presents a very different picture of man. It says, "the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life." Later it states that the Lord made woman out of a rib which he had taken from the side of man, and this, in spite of the fact that in the first chapter it says, "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Both of these accounts of creation could not, of course, be correct, for they are contradictory. Viewed from the standpoint of spiritual creation as it is recorded in the first chapter of Genesis, the story beginning in the second chapter is seen to be entirely inconsistent and illogical. Christian Science shows this second account to be an allegory written for the purpose of describing a false, materialistic sense of the real spiritual creation. This, however, is the account about which we hear most frequently, even from theologians, probably because it seems to coincide with our everyday experience; that is, if we view existence from the standpoint of material sense.

From the material point of view man seems to be nothing but an organism, with a mind inside of it, a mere machine controlled by a supposed intelligence, which is invisible and which has never been satisfactorily explained by human philosophy. Someone may be thinking, "Why, the explanation is very simple. The brain is the seat of man's intelligence, and it, through the nervous system, controls and regulates the functions and faculties, the movements and actions of the human body." But what made the brain intelligent? What gave it the power to think and to direct activity? Who has ever seen the intelligence that is supposed to be in the brain, and how do we know that it is there? Many people in the Orient believe the seat of intelligence to be in the stomach; and it might just as well be there as in the brain, for there is no essential difference between the kind of stuff that constitutes the stomach and that which constitutes the brain. Under chemical analysis they would both yield exactly the same product. The difference, then, is one of belief only; and the fact is that neither the brain nor the stomach can originate the least bit of real intelligence.

On page 468 of Science and Health, Mrs. Eddy says, "there is no life, truth, intelligence, nor substance in matter. All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all." This statement may seem startling to some of you, but it is no more startling nor radical than the declaration of Jesus, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." To the physical senses matter seems real and substantial, but these senses cannot testify truly, even of things in their own realm. Paul evidently knew this for he said, "The things which are seen are not made of things which do appear," and a modern college professor has said of material objects that all we know about them is that they are not what they seem to be. Mrs. Eddy agrees that matter is not what it seems to be, but she does not leave the subject there and say that is all we can know about it. She explains what matter is, that it exists only as a false, fleeting concept of the human mind, as a subjective state of mortal thought, or belief. But Christian Science does not take matter away from us and leave nothing in its place, for on page 269 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "Metaphysics resolves things into thoughts, and exchanges the objects of sense for the ideas of Soul. These ideas are perfectly real and tangible to spiritual consciousness, and they have this advantage over the objects and thoughts of material sense—they are good and eternal."

DISEASE MENTAL

Even slight recognition of the unreality of matter is of great practical value in everyday, human experience. Take, for example, the question of disease which occupies the attention of so many people so much of the time. In the treatment of disease, knowledge of the unreal nature of matter helps one to see that pain and suffering are not conditions of matter, but of thought. To know this is to take the first step in the direction of the permanent eradication of disease. If, as Mrs. Eddy says, there is no sensation nor intelligence in matter, it is obvious that matter cannot be sick or in pain, and that if there seems to be a sense of pain or illness, it must be in thought, and not in the body. This fact having been discerned, the futility of treating thought conditions, or mental states, with material remedies becomes evident. How impossible it would be to remove an erroneous mental condition by the use of drugs, mineral water, mud baths, or even by means of a surgical operation. Yet every day adds to the list of mental causes for disease admitted by physicians. Among the mental causes for sickness that have been recognized by physicians are fear, worry, hatred, and anger. To these Christian Scientists would add envy, jealousy, greed, dishonesty, and all flagrant and subtle phases of sin.

FEAR IS IGNORANCE

Chief among the mental causes for disease is fear. Fear is mankind's worst foe. Consideration of some of the many things of which people are afraid will convince you of this fact. They are afraid of food, of climate, of germs, of criticism, of failure, of poverty, of disease, of death. Many other phases of fear, too numerous to mention, are familiar to us all. And, it may be said that sometimes we just fear "fear."

Christian Science removes fear by first removing the ignorance which causes fear. A really intelligent or truly enlightened individual could not possibly be afraid. True spiritual enlightenment shows that God, infinite good, is the only real presence and power, and destroys the ignorant belief in an opposing power called evil. It is impossible for one who is really enlightened to believe that divine Love, the only creator, would create man in His image, and then make evil conditions to frighten and overpower him. The universe of Mind, Spirit, includes only those ideas that express Love. It does not include anything that man could fear. This universe of God is the only real universe. There is nothing in it of which man could be afraid; hence fear has no real basis, and, absolutely speaking, there is no fear.

The process employed by Christian Scientists in overcoming fear is the same as that used by them in destroying all discordant, sinful, and erroneous beliefs of the human mind. It is a process of education, or spiritual enlightenment, which substitutes as consciousness, right or true ideas for wrong beliefs. This process is a liberating one, and, eventually, it will bring complete freedom from all ills. Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free"—free from ignorance, superstition, fear, and sin,—free from the false, material beliefs, of man-made laws which seem to hold humanity in bondage.

FALSE LAWS ANNULLED

That the asserted laws which are believed to result in sickness, accident, failure, poverty, and distress are not real laws, was proved conclusively by Jesus, as it had been proved to a great extent by the prophets of old. When Peter's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, Jesus rebuked the fever (rebuked the fear), and she was well. In so doing, Jesus not only freed this woman from fear and from the consequent fever, but he also demonstrated that the medical belief that a fever must continue for a certain time is not a law. If it were a law, Jesus could not have healed this woman instantaneously.

At another time Jesus was approached by a leper, who said, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean," and Jesus stretched forth his hand and touched him, saying, "I will, be thou clean," and the man was instantly healed. Thus Jesus proved, at one and the same time, his fearlessness of contagious disease, and that the so-called law of contagion is not a law. When Jesus raised Lazarus, he overcame for him the asserted laws of mortality, dissolution, and decay. When he walked on the water, he overcame for himself the so-called law of specific gravity, and proved it to be only a theory. When he fed the multitude, he set aside the material laws of production and of demand and supply. He revealed supply to be the ever-present fact, and showed that supply is mental. It was as easy for Jesus to multiply loaves and fishes, as it is for us to multiply figures. He understood the process to be metaphysical, not depending in any way upon matter or material laws. It is neither irreverent nor inaccurate to say that Jesus of Nazareth was at once the world's greatest metaphysician and its best business man. He was engaged in the most important and exalted business there ever was: the business of knowing good and doing good, the "Father's business." Jesus was absolutely successful in his business. He neither faltered nor failed. He always had what he needed when he needed it. When money was needed for tribute, it was found in the fish's mouth. When he needed to be on the other side of the lake, he was immediately there. His rules of business conduct were golden: "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you. Love thy neighbor as thyself." "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

HEALING DIVINELY NATURAL

The works of Jesus were not miracles in the sense of being infractions of law. They were marvelous to human sense, because it is difficult for the human mind to grasp the divine naturalness of the operation of spiritual law in human experience. But for the very reason that these works of Jesus were divinely natural and lawful, they can be done today by those who understand spiritual law and its application to human needs. That is why Jesus could say, "He that believeth on me (he who understands Christ), the works that I do shall he do also." And it is a fact that these works of healing through spiritual law are being done today by Christian Scientists, to a very considerable extent. Through this work of spiritual healing and regeneration Christian Science is gradually displacing the carnal mind, which Paul said is death, and is establishing the Christ-mind, which is life. Jesus said, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." So the attainment of immortality does not depend upon dying and going to a far-off heaven or to any other place. It depends upon knowing the Truth, right here and now, the truth about God who is Life.

HELL AND HEAVEN

It is probably true that thousands have approached the transition known as death in doubt as to whether they would reach heaven, if not in positive fear that they would go to hell. This doubt and fear were due to the belief that both heaven and hell are places to which one may go after passing through the experience called death. Christian Science teaches that the experience of death is only a moment of extreme fear, and that one does not necessarily become less material or more spiritual by passing through that experience. Even after that he will have to go on working out his salvation until, through education and enlightenment, he is gradually freed from the illusions of matter and evil. Christian Science shows that the only hell is belief in the reality of evil, matter, disease, and death. This hell, obviously, is not in one place more than another, and the way for one to keep out of hell is to keep hell out of him—out of his thinking.

Heaven, Jesus said, is "at hand." If this is true, then it cannot be a place to which one may go through the "valley of the shadow." Jesus said again, speaking of heaven, "neither shall you say lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." If it is true that the kingdom of God is within, then it must be a condition of thought, or consciousness, and not a place. Christian Science teaches that heaven is harmony, and that it is wherever divine Principle is understood and demonstrated. It cannot be attained by dying and going somewhere or anywhere. It can only be realized as a state of divine Mind. Thus Christian Science establishes, through right thinking, the kingdom of heaven, and destroys the only hell that ever existed, even to human sense, the hell of wrong thinking. "There is nothing either good or bad," said Shakespeare, "but thinking makes it so." And even before that the writer of Proverbs said, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Mrs. Eddy writes, "Sin makes its own hell, and goodness its own heaven." (S. & H. 196: 18 and 19.)

HEALTH IS SINLESS

Christian Science brings health and happiness to mankind by removing from human consciousness the belief in disease and sin. Jesus said, "If I by the finger (the power) of God cast out devils (evils), then is the kingdom of God come nigh unto you." The "finger of God" has not, in the centuries that have intervened since the time of Jesus, lost its power to cast devils (evils) from the human mind. Therefore, the kingdom of God is brought nigh unto us in Christian Science. Jesus healed all manner of disease nineteen hundred years ago through the activity of the Christ-mind. He paid no attention to physical symptoms or conditions, but confined his attention entirely to the mental state of the one who was in need of healing. To the man sick of the palsy, he said, "Son, be of good cheer. Thy sins be forgiven thee," recognizing that this man's disability was due to an evil mental state, and that when the sin was forgiven, or destroyed, he would be well. And so he was.

Today, Christian Science, the Christ science, disregarding matter and its supposed laws, heals sickness and sin through the power of this same Christ-mind. The work of healing, reformation, and regeneration, which Christian Science is accomplishing, results from Truth's appearing and error's disappearing. It is natural and beautiful. It is spontaneous and harmonious, like the appearance of light dispelling darkness. Real Christian healing does not, therefore, involve a fight or struggle. In order to demonstrate the reality and power of good, and the consequent unreality and powerlessness of evil, it is not necessary to mentally "beat the air." Indeed, it may be truly said that the more struggle there is in a prayer, or treatment, the less real Science there is in it.

Because the practice of Christian Science is identical with primitive Christian healing, it is not like mesmerism, hypnotism, mental suggestion, or any form of so-called "drugless healing." Christian Scientists do not depend in healing upon the use of human will-power, nor upon any kind of mental manipulation. There is no effor on the part of the Christian Science practitioner to "control" his patient mentally. On the contrary, his effort is to convince the patient that there is in reality but one controlling influence or power—that of divine Mind. Jesus said, "I can of mine own self do nothing. The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." Christian Science claims no other healing power but this eternal Christ-mind, which healed sickness and sin in the early Christian era, and is healing today, and will continue to heal so long as there is need of healing.

FRUITAGE

In the Christian Science textbook there is a chapter of one hundred pages, called "Fruitage." This chapter consists of letters written by those who have been healed of chronic and acute disease, and of various kinds of sin and vice, by the reading and study of Science and Health. Countless others are continually testifying, that they have been healed by the study of the Bible in the light of Christian Science. Others tell of being healed by the spoken word at Christian Science church services, and at the authorized lectures on Christian Science. The healing has come to them from nothing less than Christ, Truth. Spiritual enlightenment has reavealed to them the divine facts of being. These eternal facts, displacing temporal falsities, have transformed their thinking, and what is known as a normal state of health has resulted. But just in proportion as they have become spiritually enlightened, they have discerned the fact that real health is not bodily, but mental. It is spiritual wholeness or perfection. Mrs. Eddy writes on page 120 of Science and Health, as follows: "Health is not a condition of matter, but of Mind; nor can the material senses bear reliable testimony on the subject of health."

MRS. EDDY'S LEADERSHIP

After Mrs. Eddy discovered this Science of Christian healing, she demonstrated its truth in many wonderful instances of healing through spiritual power alone. She then wrote and published the great text-book of Christian Science, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and other books on the same subject. She later established the system of spiritual teaching and healing which is rapidly extending into all parts of the world. She founded The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, which includes all the activities of this world-wide movement, and of which all other Christian Science churches are branches. She provided this church with a Manual of by-laws, which, she says, if followed in letter and spirit, will prove adequate to guide this great movement throughout all time. The wisdom, courage, faithfulness, consecration, and inspiration of Mrs. Eddy's leadership are daily becoming more apparent and better appreciated.

SCIENCE OF BEING

On page 128 of Science and Health Mrs. Eddy says, "The term Science, properly understood, refers only to the laws of God and to His government of the universe inclusive of man. * * * * A knowledge of the Science of being develops the latent abilities and possibilities of man. It extends the atmosphere of thought, giving mortals access to broader and higher realms. It raises the thinker into his native air of insight and perspicacity." Christian Science, then, is the Science of true living, of real being. For this reason it is equal to the solution of every human problem. Earnest thinkers—teachers, philosophers, economists, and statesmen—are deeply concerned with the solution of the many problems which confront us at this time. The correct solution of these problems is of the utmost importance to mankind; and it is a cause for rejoicing that this solution is at hand. In the Science of Christianity will be found the right way out of all forms of human discord. Jesus of Nazareth knew more about true economy and harmonious government, than any man who ever lived.

Today we find discord and unrest on every hand. The world is in an unprecedented state of turmoil. Strikes and lockouts, conflicts and controversies are raging all about us. This is due entirely to the inherent selfishness of the human mind and nothing will stop the tempest but the Mind of Christ. Many are looking forward,—some hopefully and expectantly—to the establishment of permanent peace. But we cannot overlook the fact that there are in all human organizations the elements which make for war and strife, because in all human institutions, whether known as governments, churches, labor unions, employers' associations, schools, or families, may be found the injustice, dishonesty, avarice and fear which generate war. These evil mental traits obtain to some extent in the consciousness of every individual human being. And, obviously, an organization can be no better than the individuals who compose it. Thus it will be seen that the conflict in thought between good and evil, right and wrong, must continue, under the guidance and direction of divine Principle, until every vestige of evil thinking has been displaced by the Mind of Christ; and then shall the world have peace.

There is one thought in particular which, if you will carry it away with you from this lecture, will be found most helpful in your daily experience, whatever the nature of your occupation may be. That thought to which I refer is this: there is a power always available to you that is greater than any human power, bigger than any person or set of persons, superior to any circumstance or combination of circumstances. This power is the law of Love, the law of divine Principle. It is not necessary to go anywhere to find this law, for it is ever-present. You need not wait for it to become operative, for it is always operating. You can rest in the assurance that this law of divine Principle will turn and overturn, adjust and readjust, until the conscious harmony of your being is revealed as an established fact.

Near the beginning of the lecture I quoted one sentence from what is known as the "Scientific Statement of Being," which will be found on page 468 of Science and Health. This statement is the essence and epitome of Christian Science. It may be amplified and commented upon indefinitely, but nothing essential can be added to it. I should like in closing to read this statement in full. It is as follows:

"There is no life, truth, intelligence, nor substance in matter. All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all. Spirit is immortal Truth; matter is mortal error. Spirit is the real and eternal; matter is the unreal and temporal. Spirit is God, and man is His image and likeness. Therefore man is not material; he is spiritual."

DEDUCTION OF GIFTS IN INCOME RETURNS

By REX B. GOODCELL,
Collector of Internal Revenue

How am I to determine to what extent contributions or gifts, made to corporations, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, or educational purposes or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals or to the special fund for vocational rehabilitation, may be claimed as a deduction?

You should first ascertain what your taxable net income would be were you not entitled to a deduction on account of such contributions or gifts, and then if the aggregate of your contributions and gifts made during the year to such organizations does not exceed 15 per cent of your taxable net income so computed, their aggregate amount may be entered in the place provided therefor under "Contributions" on a personal return form. If such aggregate amount exceeds 15 per cent of your taxable net income so computed, the excess can not be claimed.

For example: Your total taxable income amounts to $20,000. During the year you have contributed to the American Red Cross $1,000, to the Young Men's Christian Association $1,000, toward the construction of a new church $1,000, and to the Associated Charities of your home city $500, a total of $3,500. Fifteen per cent of your total net income amounts to $3,000. Therefore, this latter amount may be claimed as a deduction and the balance of your contributions and gifts may not be claimed.

In claiming a deduction on account of such contributions or gifts there should be shown on the return of income (a) the name and address of each organization to which a contribution or gift was made, and (b) the date and amount of each such contribution or gift.

Where a gift is other than money the basis for calculation of the amount of the gift shall be the cost of the property, if acquired after February 28, 1913, or its fair market value as of March 1, 1913, if acquired prior thereto, after deducting from such cost or value the amount, if any, which has been or which should have been set aside and deducted in the current year and previous years from gross income on account of depreciation, and which has not been paid out in making good the depreciation sustained.

During 1922 I contributed $100 toward the support of a needy family. May this contribution be claimed as a deduction?

Contributions or gifts made to individuals do not constitute allowable deductions.

Am I entitled to any deduction by reason of contributions or gifts made in 1922 by a partnership of which I am a member, to the organizations mentioned in the above question?

Yes; since the partnership may not deduct the amount of such contributions or gifts in computing its net income, you may deduct your proportionate share of the contributions or gifts, but your total deduction for contributions or gifts may not exceed 15 per cent of your net income.

Will failure to file my return within the time prescribed by law render me liable to any penalty?

Yes; if filed on a calendar year basis and you fail to file your 1922 return in the office of the collector for your district before the close of business on March 15, 1922 (provided, of course, that an extension has not been secured), you will be liable to an ad valorem penalty of 25 per cent of the amount of the tax and a specific penalty of not more than $1,000. When your return is made on a fiscal year basis, it should be filed on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year.

If I fail to pay my tax or any installment thereof on or before the prescribed date, what penalties will I be liable to?

If any tax or installment thereof remains unpaid after the date when it is due, and for ten days after notice and demand, there will be added a penalty of 5 per cent of the amount of the tax due, plus interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month from the original due date, and the offender will also be liable to a specific penalty of not more than $1,000. The intstructions on the return serve as notice and demand for payment of the first installment, and if any installment is not paid when due, the whole amount of the tax becomes due and payable upon notice and demand. Estates of insane, deceased or insolvent persons are not liable to penalties for delay in payment of tax.

If I am negligent in making my return and understate the amount of tax due, what penalties will I be liable to?

Where an understatement of tax is found to be due to negligence on the part of the taxpayer, but without intent to defraud, there will be added a penalty of 5 per cent of the total amount of the deficiency and interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month on the amount of the deficiency of each installment from the time it was due.

What would happen should a taxpayer render a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade payment of a proper amount of tax?

He would be liable to a penalty of 50 per cent of the amount of the total understatement and a fine of not more than $10,000, or one year's imprisonment, or both, and the costs of the prosecution.

Not long ago a small boy made a woman angry and amused a whole car full of people. The boy was sitting quietly when a very stout woman entered the car. As nobody got up to give her a seat, she stood up, hanging on to a strap and enjoying all the twists and turns of the car. They had gone about a quarter of a mile when the small boy rose and in a whisper that could be heard by everybody said: "I'll be one of three men to give the lady a seat."

Truths in Epigram

We have a debt to every great heart, to every fine genius. —Emerson.

Falsehood and fraud shoot up in every soil, the product of all climes.—Addison.

Seldom comes glory till a man be dead.—Herrick.

Fame sometimes hath created something of nothing.—Fuller.

CHILD LABOR DAY

There are a few facts concerning child labor that most people do not know. They are important facts, worth thinking about. It would be impossible to cite them all here, but a few may be mentioned.

The census of 1920 shows that in the United States more than a million children from ten to fifteen years old are working in gainful occupations; not that they gain much personally. Thousands of children less than ten also are working but the census did not take them into account. Perhaps the truth, coming as a revelation, had not been suspected.

Child labor as the term ordinarily is employed, has no relation to the circumstance that a leather-lunged school boy may peddle papers after hours. Nor does it mean the exceptional youngster of great genius whose talents permit him to earn vast sums without undergoing privation. A Jackie Coogan, earning far more than the President of the United States, is no object of pity. There is no fear that his health or education will be neglected.

The children whose unhappy lives call to humanity are the ones toiling in factories, in mines and in mills. They keep hard hours. Some of them are engaged on night jobs. As a rule they get small pay, often that a heartless and lazy parent may not have to work at all. They have no chance to learn anything but a deadly routine. They are stunted in mind and body. They hardly are aware that they have souls. They exist in ignorance and hopelessness.

There comes to mind a question: shall these children be saved? It cannot be that they are not entitled to be saved. The last Sunday in January was "Child Labor Day." It should have been made the occasion of fervid denunciation of a great evil, that legislators might be aroused to action.

The matter is for the federal government. The states of high rank for intelligecne have attended to the matter in part. Other states remain obdurate, and there is pressing necessity for overriding their wicked stupidity.

REFORMING THE SPEEDER

Drastic treatment by the courts has had an appreciable effect upon the manners of drivers. Even at a crowded crossing it is possible to notice indications of courtesy. The idea that whether a machine be past a given point at a given second, or shall reach that point thirty seconds later seems no longer to inspire homicidal mania. Even the pedestrian is given more than formerly considered his legitimate chance at a whole skin and sound bones.

When the courts began sending speeders to jail the effect was good, and yet there were found those to whom a jail sentence was a jocular episode. Not always involving moral obloquy, it was regarded as an interesting experience. The judicial thought was tempered by this circumstance, so that now the offender is likely to get hit in his tenderest spot if this is his pocketbook. There really seems to be a proper remedy for every case.

Just as speeders are becoming tamed, a legislator introduces a bill to abolish the speed-trap. He wants the watchful officer to be out in full sight of the automobilist. An excellent scheme for the automobilist who intends to violate the law as often as the chance is presented. If the streets and highways could be lined visibly with police, there would be no speeding. In the absence of such possibility, the knowledge that there may be a speed-trap, and an unseen officer watching it, is highly effective. The trap harms noboby who refrains from speeding. That it may harm such a law-breaker does not seem to be a good reason that the legislator should rush to his rescue. When he merits a penalty, let the speeder get it. The experience will be reformatory.

LOOKING TO THE WEST

The critical situation existing in Europe is reflected in Southern California. Within the past few weeks hotels in this part of the state have received applications for reservations for in excess of the number usually received at this time of the year.

Scores of tourists who planned to make a European trip this year have changed their plans and with the advertising that California has received in the east they have naturally been attracted in this direction. As a result the great trend of travel has changed.

Trains are running from the frigid east to sunny California in three sections. Thousands of dollars which would have gone abroad will be expended in California and what is better scores of visitors will become imbued with the California spirit and resolve to make their homes here.

It is an ill wind that blows no good.

Arizona comes to the front with the discovery of a jug of p. ified whisky. In after years they'll probably discover a petrified liar in that vicinity.

Although the giraffe carries his head higher than the porcupine, the latter is more stuck up.

A girl can be clever even if she isn't pretty—and nine men out of ten will never know the difference.

THE MODERN GIRL

A man in Syracuse was haled to court for spanking his daughter. She was present as plaintiff. "Pa is too old fashioned," she told the judge. "He doesn't take the modern view of things. He doesn't seem to realize that girls my age must have some fun."

Perhaps she uttered a sweeping truth. The modern girl resents restrictions that once were deemed not only proper but inevitable. There never was a time, however, that a girl having outgrown infancy, submitted gracefully to a paternal spanking, or admitted to herself that she had deserved it.

The particular case under consideration stands by itself, however. Father has reached the dignity of eighty-six, and daughter admits to sixty. Even in these modern times, when middle age is pushed along to the point that once would have been considered venerable, it is rare for a girl to remain at sixty in the classification that had been her's at sixteen. If she can do it, and get away with it, there are a lot who would be glad to find out her methods.

Girls will be girls of course, as certainly as boys will be boys, but in the lapse of time, through perfectly naturally processes, they are wont to cease being girls. This one was the exception.

The verdict of the court is not at hand. It ought to have embodied a rebuke to the old codger. A girl of sixty is mature enough to have a latch key, and too mature to lend herself graciously to the operation of being spanked.

A CASE IN POINT

A girl arrested in Los Angeles for forgery, not her first arrest, was permitted to escape by a tender-hearted nurse. The prisoner had managed deftly to get transferred to the hospital. There she impressed the nurse as reformed. She promised to go straight. The nurse braved a jail term by opening the door for her.

The promise to go straight was not kept, except that the girl did go straight to San Francisco where she at once resumed the passing of spurious checks. Now she is in jail again. The case is cited because it is typical of many. This foolish girl is a dope fiend, hophead, or in more proper term, a drug addict. She is an example of what drugs do for their victims. The first effect is to kill the moral nature. No ennobling impulse thrills the soul of the drug addict. The only conscious emotion is the yearning for the favored poison. This leads invariably to crime. Often it is a crime of violence rather than of fraud.

Los Angeles finding that it has scores of drug addicts in its prisons has set aside a sum to be devoted to their reformation. This course seems necessary. Turning loose such a horde of criminals still actuated by the desire to indulge their depraved passions, would more than offset the effort to stem the stream of underworld activities by increased police, and sterner application of the law. If the addict can be cured, the safety of society demands application of the cure.

Black eyes are mostly beautiful when given by nature.

THE GIST OF COUE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The gist of Coue is the old scientific truth that faculty precedes function in evolution, while the old religious truth expressed by Horace Bushnell is that duty is not to be measured by ability.

Dr. Frank Crane

In plain English it is that somehow and at some time the thing will happen if we all look for it hard enough.

Bolton Hall tells a story to the effect that he went out into the streets and gazed up at a flagpole. Presently some one stopped beside him.

"What are you looking at?"

"Oh, the flag."

"I don't see any flag," said the newcomer.

Another man stopped and the first said to the second, "Do you see that flag?"

"Where?"

"Why, up there, on that pole."

Others stopped to see what was going on.

"The flag, they are looking at the flag."

"Where?"

"Why, up there; don't you see it?"

"Oh yes," said one, "I see it," and somebody else plainly saw it too.

"There, up there—the flag," said several.

Presently the janitor stuck his head out of the window.

"What's the row?" he shouted.

"The flag, they are looking for the flag."

"Why, of course," he said, "I'll put it right up." And he did.

Day by day in every way if you keep on expecting anything something is liable to happen.

By and by somebody will always hang out the flag.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

JAMES W. FOLEY

It is a splendid thing to know and know that you know.

When you reach that happy state you are a very desirable citizen.

But be sure of your ground.

Be sure that you know. And then you will know that you know.

* * *

Knowledge and courage are the greatest assets in life.

Half truths are dangerous, because they lead people off on the wrong track.

Just as a defective signboard, in which only half the direction is clear, may lead you off on a blind road and get you into all sorts of difficulty.

* * *

Knowledge is of little value without courage.

Courage is of little value without knowledge.

Taken together, knowledge and courage will achieve everything.

* * *

Knowledge and courage will redeem the world from sin and error.

Knowledge and courage will tunnel a mountain, bridge a chasm, make a desert blossom with flower and fruit, span an ocean with a bridge or aid to carry over men and put a girdle around the earth in forty seconds, or less, as someone said in Shakespeare—we think it was Puck.

* * *

Courage alone is of small value.

Courage needs knowledge to direct it.

The Light Brigade at Balakalava had courage.

But the Light Brigade was exterminated, to no purpose.

Knowledge would not have exposed the Light Brigade to destruction.

Knowledge may be gotten from books, from capable instructors, from observation and experience.

Courage comes from an entirely different source.

Courage comes from within yourself.

Courage is a hardy plant that grows in the soil of cleanliness and fair dealing and righteousness.

Courage is that spirit that arises from a conscious knowledge of rectitude.

* * *

No criminal is courageous.

He may seem to be, but he is not. Unconsciously, he trembles whenever he thinks the jaw is upon him.

He skulks and cowers in dark places, but he is not courageous.

* * *

No man who lives by sharp practice, who takes unlawful profits, who traffics in the sins and weaknesses of his fellows is ever courageous.

Conscience makes him a coward.

* * *

No man is courageous except that man who, in the language of that truthful but uncouth westerner, can "look every man in the eye and tell him to go"—wherever he wishes.

And no man can do that who has an uneasy conscience.

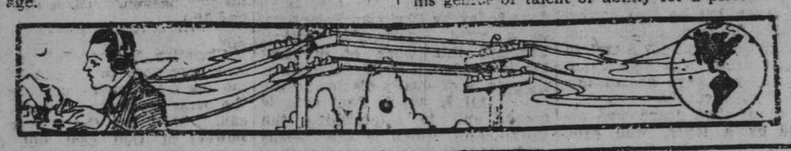
* * *

We can forgive the man who makes mistakes.

But we want them to be his own mistakes.

We cannot forgive the man who makes mistakes at somebody else's direction or for hire.

We cannot forgive the man who prostitutes his genius or talent or ability for a price.



Songs of the Poets

Dregs—By Ernest Dowson (1867-1900)

The fire is out, and spent the warmth thereof,
(This is the end of every song man sings!)
The golden wine is drunk, the dregs remain,
Bitter as wormwood and as salt as pain;
And hearth and hope have gone the way of love
Into the drear oblivion of lost things.

Ghosts go along with us until the end;
This was a mistress, this, perhaps, a friend.
With pale, indifferent eyes, we sit and wait
For the dropped curtain and the closing gate:
This is the end of all the songs man sings.

THE MEEK AND HIS OWN

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Sitting around on hollow logs and stumps waiting to see the meek inherit the earth has been part of my job for a good many years.

When I was a kid they told me that the meek would inherit the earth; this was designed to inspire meekness in my turbulent and rebellious small soul. It did nothing of the kind, but it set me eagerly to watching the performances of the meek.

The result of my survey of the situation is a state of constant wonder. WHAT will the meek do with the earth once they have inherited it? The world is full of a number of things and it is my private opinion that some of them will fail to function effectively if the meek are in charge of the works.

From these comments you may gather that I hold the opinion that the meek are getting a poor training for the task of running the world; and that, should they inherit it, they will either lose it pronto or part with all qualities of meekness and humility.

What exactly would the meek do with Wall street, the politicians of the two dominant political parties, the labor problem, the divorce and alimony muddle, the radicals in congress, the farm bloc, the corporations and the income tax?

Were I pushed I could mention a few other problems that are at present putting gray hairs into the heads of the most belligerent, for example, the Turko-Greek embroglio, the race conflict, the Japanese problem and Billy Sunday, not to mention the bootleggers and all their works, Lenine, Trotsky, free love.

As I sit here surveying things in general it strikes me that giving the world, as it is organized, to the meek is a good deal like handing a hornet's nest to a pair of Irish twins for a Christmas present.

The Lord knows I'm not meek and so when inheritance day arrives I am one who will be only a looker-on at the feast; but I just want to get this out of my statement: If I were one of the meek I'd be training somebody to look after my inheritance when I got it. And it would be a two-fisted male man with a gladiator's body, the mind of a New York financier and a conscience that had been duly seasoned by a long political career.

I believe in preparedness.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

POST OFFICE DEFICIT

[New York Times]

At present the post office department is run at a loss. Where the losses are shown it does not sufficiently appear whether they are in operating costs or capital waste. Some of the post office losses are borne by others. The railways are not sufficiently paid for carrying the mails. The parcel post is run at a loss after having disabled the express companies from competing. The inner politics of the post office should not be allowed to scrap the budget in the manner described by General Dawes: "Without the knowledge of the controller general this whole matter had been chucked into the waste-paper basket, so to speak, by a lot of subordinates who were opposed to the change and who, in his own organization, had kept it from the attention of the controller general himself."

In the words of former Postmaster General Hays, published recently, the parcel post accounts for 60 per cent of the department's loss. He says that "the parcel post is entirely a commercial matter and should carry its own load." That is business sense, and therefore bad politics. Farmers would bewail the withdrawal of a privilege which costs the taxpayer dear. Everybody who gets anything from the government and does not get a personal tax bill will rally for the preservation of services at less than cost.

"ESSENTIALLY WILSONISM"

[Charleston News and Courier]

Of course, the Borah amendment is essentially "Wilsonism"—a return to the aim and purpose and method, if not to the covenant, of the League of Nations. This may make it harder for the administration to move, for no amount of camouflage can conceal the truth. But the Borah proposal, even if the senate fails to adopt it, will unquestionably bear fruit. Necessity, which will wait no longer, now drives the administration to the step which it should have taken long ago; and Senator Borah's change of front removes the most formidable barrier which all this while has deterred the administration from doing the right thing and the sensible thing.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

E. H. Hancock formerly was a reporter on the Los Angeles Tribune and knows his way about. He now is district superintendent of the public employment bureau, and he is on the job. Part of his duty is to recognize a faker when he sees one.

HENRY JAMES

Mr. Hancock has written an open letter to ministers and business men of Los Angeles warning them of the "high-brow, white collared beggars" who are beginning to infest that city. His letter concludes: "If you will take a solemn resolve not to give these panhandlers a cent, during the coming winter this city will be free from half the gentry that collect from you at the time you are passing a dark alley."

This sounds as though Hancock were a fierce and bristling individual, which is precisely what he is not. He hates a loafer who pretends to be loafing for lack of chance to do anything else. He asks that men applying for work be sent to him, and guarantees each something to do to support himself until better opportunities are available. But he adds that out of 100 thus sent to him not more than a single one would come. The truth is that beggars are not in quest of work. There is nothing that offends them so poignantly as the proffer of it.

Suppose the householder needs a man to mow his lawn, for example, he is likely to have difficulty in getting one, and such work pays fifty cents an hour. Nobody needs to beg. If through illness and misfortune the individual is reduced to want, there are proper agencies to which he may go, and that have been created for the very purpose of taking care of him, and of preventing the professional beggar from imposing on the charitable.

Bandits and thieves of all sorts, if caught, are likely to plead the lack of work. They would scorn honest work. They have not the slightest intention of engaging in it. Wages could not tempt them. They think they have found an easier way.

It is true that a man in search of work cannot always get that which he likes best, or perhaps for which he is best adapted. But if he is the right stuff he will accept. If he is the wrong stuff he will decline, generally with a sneer, to solicit a passerby for money. And then Hancock will get after him.

The greatest chain of moving picture houses in the world seems to have come into the management of one organization, with headquarters in Los Angeles. The effect of this in relation to the public remains to be seen. It might easily be an improvement.

In some lines monopoly has proved to be of benefit. But unless the control of the monopoly is in the hands of men of broad ideas, and a sense of their obligations to patrons, the opposite result is to be expected.

Turkey has received an ultimatum from England. Apparently it has a very definite meaning. While it is true the allies have submitted to much Turkish arrogance, very evidently this has been due to the desire to avoid war. If Turkey should elect to make war inevitable, when next chased out of Europe, probably it would be for keeps.

It may be that Turkey is relying on Russia for aid. If ever in history there has been an instance of leaning on a broken reed, this reliance would be it.

When there is a notable crime, as for example that of the murder of the Rev. Hall and his paramour in New Jersey, at first the clues are abundant. Officers of the law have the guilty under surveillance. Arrests may be expected at any time. Nobody is arrested. The end of the story.

Somewhat similar is the crime involving the death of Fritzi Mann. There has been much talk. At this writing the chances seem to be that the whole matter will end in talk. The finger of suspicion has been pointed freely enough. If it has pointed correctly it has been in the direction of somebody with the gift of invisibility, or possessed of an extraordinary pull.

Of course these speculations are subject to change without notice.

One of the mysteries of life is how a reporter can work up a fever of interest over the fact that this or that film star is to be married or unmarried or both. The rumor may be true, but why all the excitement?

To the stars that get the most publicity in this fashion sporadic domesticity is the merest incidental of life. Marriage and divorce alternate as fast as the law allows, and some of them, questioned suddenly, might be puzzled to say which state of bliss they were enjoying at the moment.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

The Missus and I had one of our periodical rows this morning. They do not disturb me as much as they used to. Once the day was ruined when she refused to kiss me good-by. I would brood over her cruelty for hours. Now I forget it before I get the morning paper unfolded. It is not that I love her any less, but I have been hammered into a state of philosophy. Most women must have a little spat now and then. It helps to keep them interested.

This morning's domestic event was a trifle out of the ordinary, though. I did the effective rowing. I had my attack nicely planned. I went at her so hard I had her gasping. Then I got away before she could frame a come-back. She wanted me to go with her to call on the Doodles, and I refused.

"You're selfish," she said, in a rage. "No matter what I want to do, you refuse. You want to sit at home night after night and read your old books."

"Now, listen," was my reply. "We've sat at home just three nights out of the last nine. Six nights we either went to the movies, or called on the Synthetic Sisters, or listened to lectures or did some other fool thing. I did not want to go out of the house one of those nights. When I strike on the tenth night you say I'm selfish."

Then I gave her a little lecture. She isn't the only wife who calls her husband selfish when he balks at some dodgasted social foolishness. That is the first thing that any wife learns to say after the rapture of the honeymoon has worn thin. No matter what he may want to do—or may not want to do—contrary to her wishes she says he is selfish. Usually the poor chump weakens under the charge. He lacks the moral courage to be selfish in self-defense.

"You always have a good time when you go out," she alleged.

That isn't true, either. Just because I do not want to pout in company she claims I'm enjoying myself. If I acted the way I feel sometimes my genial hosts would call the constable.

SECOND INSTALLMENT

"Not your political career, sir?"

There was a moment in which Chilcote hesitated, a moment in which the desire that had filled his mind for months rose to his lips and hung there; then the question, the incredulity in Blessington's face, chilled it and it fell back into silence.

"I—I didn't say that," he murmured. "You young men jump to conclusions, Blessington."

"Forgive me, sir. I never meant to imply retirement. Why, Rickshaw, Vale, Cressham, and the whole Wark crowd would be about your ears like flies if such a thing were even breathed—now more than ever, since these Persian rumors. By-the-way, is there anything real in this border business? The St. George's came out rather strong last night."

Chilcote had moved back to the table. His face was pale from his outburst and his fingers toyed restlessly with the open newspaper.

"I haven't seen the St. George's," he said, hastily. "Lakely is always ready to shake the red rag where Russia is concerned; whether we are to enter the arena is another matter. But what about Craig, Burnage? I think you mentioned something of a contract."

"Oh, don't worry about that, sir." Blessington had caught the twitching at the corners of Chilcote's mouth, the nervous sharpness of his voice. "I can put Craig, Burnage off. If they have an answer by Thursday it will be time enough." He began to collect his papers, but Chilcote stopped him.

"Wait," he said, veering suddenly. "Wait. I'll see to it now. I'll feel more myself when I've done something. I'll come with you to the study."

He walked hastily across the room; then, with his hand on the door, he paused.

"You go first, Blessington," he said. "I'll—I'll follow you in ten minutes. I must glance through the newspapers first."

Blessington looked uncertain. "You won't forget, sir?"

"Forget? Of course not."

Still doubtfully, Blessington left the room and closed the door.

Once alone, Chilcote walked slowly back to the table, drew up his chair, and sat down with his eyes on the white cloth, the paper lying unheeded beside him.

Time passed. A servant came into the room to remove the breakfast. Chilcote moved slightly when necessary, but otherwise retained his attitude. The servant, having finished his task, replenished the fire and left the room. Chilcote still sat on.

At last, feeling numbed, he rose and crossed to the fireplace. The clock on the mantel-piece stared him in the face. He looked at it, started slightly, then drew out his watch. Watch and clock corresponded. Each marked twelve o'clock. With a nervous motion he leaned forward and pressed the electric bell long and hard.

Instantly a servant answered.

"Is Mr. Blessington in the study?" Chilcote asked.

"He was there, sir, five minutes back."

Chilcote looked relieved.

"All right! Tell him I have gone out—had to go out. Something important. You understand?".

"I understand, sir."

But before the words had been properly spoken Chilcote had passed the man and walked into the hall.

CHAPTER III

LEAVING his house, Chilcote walked forward quickly and aimlessly. With the sting of the outer air the recollection of last night's adventure came back upon him. Since the hour of his waking it had hung about with vague persistence, but now in the clear light of day it seemed to stand out with a fuller peculiarity.

The thing was preposterous, nevertheless it was genuine. He was wearing the overcoat he had worn the night before, and, acting on impulse, he thrust his hand into the pocket and drew out the stranger's card.

"Mr. John Loder!" He read the name over as he walked along, and it mechanically repeated itself in his brain—falling into measure with his steps. Who was John Loder? What was he? The questions tantalized him till his pace unconsciously increased. The thought that two men so absurdly alike could inhabit the same city and remain unknown to each other faced him as a problem; it tangled with his personal worries and aggravated them. There seemed to be almost a danger in such an extraordinary likeness. He began to regret his impetuosity in thrusting his card upon the man. Then, again, how he had let himself go on the subject of Lexington! How narrowly he had escaped compromise! He turned hot and cold at the recollection of what he had said and what he might have said. Then for the first time he paused in his walk and looked about him.

On leaving Grosvenor Square he had turned westward, moving rapidly till the Marble Arch was reached; there, still oblivious to his surroundings, he had crossed the roadway to the Edgware Road, passing along it to the labyrinth of shabby streets that lie behind Paddington. Now, as he glanced about him, he saw with some surprise how far he had come.

The damp remnants of the fog still hung about the house-tops in a filmy veil; there were no glimpses of green to break the monotony of tone; all was quiet, dingy, neglected. But to Chilcote the shabbiness was restful, the subdued atmosphere a satisfaction. Among these sad houses, these passers-by, each filled with his own concerns, he experienced a sense of respite and relief. In the fashionable streets that bounded his own horizon, if a man paused in his walk to work out an idea he instantly drew a crowd of inquisitive or contemptuous eyes; here, if a man halted for half an hour it was nobody's business but his own.

Enjoying this thought, he wandered on for close upon an hour, moving from one street to another with steps that were listless or rapid, as inclination prompted; then, still acting with vagrant aimlessness, he stopped in his wanderings and entered a small eating-house.

The place was low-ceiled and dirty, the air hot and steaming with the smell of food, but Chilcote passed through the door and moved to one of the tables with no expression of disgust, and with far less furtive watchfulness than he used in his own house. By a curious mental twist he felt greater freedom, larger opportunities in drab surroundings such as these than in the broad issues and weighty responsibilities of his own life. Choosing a corner seat, he called for coffee; and there, protected by shadow and wrapped in cigarette smoke, he set about imagining himself some vagrant unit who had slipped his moorings and was blissfully adrift.

The imagination was pleasant while it lasted, but with him nothing was permanent. Of late the greater part of his sufferings had been comprised in the irritable fickleness of all his aims—the distaste for and impossibility of sustained effort in any direction. He had barely lighted a second cigarette when the old restlessness fell upon him; he stirred nervously in his seat, and the cigarette was scarcely burned out when he rose, paid his small bill, and left the shop.

Outside on the pavement he halted, pulled out his watch, and saw that two hours stretched in front before any appointment claimed his attention. He wondered vaguely where he might go to—what he might do in those two hours? In the last few minutes a distaste for solitude had risen in his mind, giving the close street a loneliness that had escaped him before.

As he stood wavering a cab passed slowly down the street. The sight of a well-dressed man roused the cabman; flicking his whip, he passed Chilcote close, feigning to pull up.

The cab suggested civilization. Chilcote's mind veered suddenly and he raised his hand. The vehicle stopped and he climbed in.

"Where, sir?" The cabman peered down through the roof-door.

Chilcote raised his head. "Oh, anywhere near Pall Mall," he said. Then, as the horse started forward, he put up his hand and shook the trap-door. "Wait!" he called. "I've changed my mind. Drive to Cadogan Gardens—No. 33."

The distance to Cadogan Gardens was covered quickly. Chilcote had hardly realized that his destination was reached when the cab pulled up. Jumping out, he paid the fare and walked quickly to the hall-door of No. 33.

"Is Lady Astrupp at home?" he asked, sharply, as the door swung back in answer to his knock.

The servant drew back deferentially. "Her ladyship has almost finished lunch, sir," he said.

For answer Chilcote stepped through the door-way and walked half-way across the hall.

"All right," he said. "But don't disturb her on my account. I'll wait in the white room till she has finished." And, without taking further notice of the servant, he began to mount the stairs.

In the room where he had chosen to wait a pleasant wood-fire brightened the dull January afternoon and softened the thick, white curtains, the gilt furniture, and the Venetian vases filled with white roses. Moving straight forward, Chilcote paused by the grate and stretched his hands to the blaze; then, with his usual instability, he turned and passed to a couch that stood a yard or two away.

On the couch, tucked away between a novel and a crystal gazing-ball, was a white Persian kitten, fast asleep. Chilcote picked up the ball and held it between his eyes and the fire; then he laughed superciliously, tossed it back into its place, and caught the kitten's tail. The little animal stirred, stretched itself, and began to purr. At the same moment the door of the room opened.

Chilcote turned round. "I particularly said you were not to be disturbed," he began. "Have I merited displeasure?" He spoke fast, with the uneasy tone that so often underran his words.

Lady Astrupp took his hand with a confiding gesture and smiled.

"Never displeasure," she said, lingeringly, and again she smiled. The smile might have struck a close observer as faintly artificial. But what man in Chilcote's frame of mind has time to be observant where women are concerned? The manner of the smile was very sweet and almost caressing—and that sufficed.

"What have you been doing?" she asked, after a moment. "I thought I was quite forgotten." She moved across to the couch, picked up the kitten, and kissed it. "Isn't this sweet?" she added.

She looked very graceful as she turned, holding the little animal up. She was a woman of twenty-seven, but she looked a girl. The outline of her face was pure, the pale gold of her hair almost ethereal, and her tall, slight figure still suggested the suppleness, the possibility of future development, that belongs to youth. She wore a lace-colored gown that harmonized with the room and with the delicacy of her skin.

"Now sit down and rest—or walk about the room. I sha'n't mind which." She nestled into the couch and picked up the crystal ball.

"What is the toy for?" Chilcote looked at her from the mantel-piece, against which he was resting. He had never defined the precise attraction that Lillian Astrupp held for him. Her shallowness soothed him; her inconsequent egotism helped him to forget himself. She never asked him how he was, she never expected impossibilities. She let him come and go and act as he pleased, never demanding reasons. Like the kitten, she was charming and graceful and easily amused; it was possible that, also like the kitten, she could scratch and be spiteful on occasion, but that did not weigh with him. He sometimes expressed a vague envy of the late Lord Astrupp; but, even had circumstances permitted, it is doubtful whether he would have chosen to be his successor. Lillian as a friend was delightful, but Lillian as a wife would have been a different consideration.

"What is the toy for?" he asked again.

She looked up slowly. "How cruel of you, Jack! It is my very latest hobby."

It was part of her attraction that she was never without a craze. Each new one was as fleeting as the last, but to each she brought the same delightfully insincere enthusiasm, the same picturesque devotion. Each was a pose, but she posed so sweetly that nobody lost patience.

"You mustn't laugh!" she protested, letting the kitten slip to the ground. "I've had lessons at five guineas each from the most fascinating person—a professional; and I'm becoming quite an adept. Of course I haven't been much beyond the milky appearance yet, but the milky appearance is everything, you know; the rest will come. I am trying to persuade Blanche to let me have a pavilion at her party in March, and gaze for all you dull political people." Again she smiled.

Chilcote smiled as well. "How is it done?" he asked, momentarily amused.

"Oh the doing is quite delicious. You sit at a table with the ball in front of you; then you take the subject's hands, spread them out on the table, and stroke them very softly while you gaze into the crystal; that gets up the sympathy, you know." She looked up innocently. "Shall I show you?"

Chilcote moved a small table nearer to the couch and spread his hands upon it, palms downward. "Like this, eh?" he said. Then a ridiculous nervousness seized him and he moved away. "Some other day," he said, quickly. "You can show me some other day. I'm not very fit this afternoon."

It Lillian felt any disappointment, she showed none. "Poor old thing!" she said, softly. "Try to sit here by me and we won't bother about anything." She made a place for him beside her, and as he dropped into it she took his hand and patted it sympathetically.

The touch was soothing, and he bore it patiently enough. After a moment she lifted the hand with a little exclamation of reproof.

"You degenerate person! You have ceased to manicure. What has become of my excellent training?"

Chilcote laughed. "Run to seed," he said, lightly. Then his expression and tone changed. "When a man gets to my age," he added, "little social luxuries don't seem worth while; the social necessities are irksome enough. Personally, I envy the beggar in the street—exempt from shaving, exempt from washing—"

Lillian raised her delicate eyebrows. The sentiment was beyond her perception.

"But manicuring," she said, reproachfully, "when you have such nice hands. It was your hands and your eyes, you know, that first appealed to me." She sighed gently, with a touch of sentimental remembrance. "And I thought it so strong of you not to wear rings—it must be such a temptation." She looked down at her own fingers, glittering with jewels.

But the momentary pleasure of her touch was gone. Chilcote drew away his hand and picked up the book that lay between them.

"'Other Men's Shoes!' he read. "A novel, of course?"

She smiled. "Of course. Such a fantastic story. Two men changing identities."

Chilcote rose and walked back to the mantel-piece.

"Changing identities?" he said, with a touch of interest.

"Yes. One man is an artist, the other a millionaire; one wants to know what fame is like, the other wants to know how it feels to be really sinfully rich. So they exchange experiences for a month." She laughed.

Chilcote laughed as well. "But how?" he asked.

"Oh, I told you the idea was absurd. Fancy two people so much alike that neither their friends nor their servants see any difference! Such a thing couldn't be, could it?"

Chilcote looked down at the fire. "No," he said, doubtfully. "No. I suppose not."

"Of course not. There are likenesses, but not freak likenesses like that."

Chilcote's head was bent as she spoke, but at the last words he lifted it.

"By Jove! I don't know about that!" he said. "Not so very long ago I saw two men so much alike that I—I—" He stopped.

Lillian smiled.

He colored quickly. "You doubt me?" he asked.

"My dear Jack!" Her voice was delicately reproachful.

"Then you think that my—my imagination has been playing me tricks?"

"My dear boy! Nothing of the kind. Come back to your place and tell me the whole tale." She smiled again, and patted the couch invitingly.

But Chilcote's balance had been upset. For the first time he saw Lillian as one of the watchful, suspecting crowd before which he was constantly on guard. Acting on the sensation, he moved suddenly towards the door.

"I—I have an appointment at the House," he said, quickly. "I'll look in another day when—when I'm better company. I know I'm a bear today. My nerves, you know." He came back to the couch and took her hand; then he touched her cheek for an instant with his fingers.

"Good-bye," he said. "Take care of yourself—and the kitten," he added, with forced gayety, as he crossed the room.

That afternoon Chilcote's nervous condition reached its height. All day he had avoided the climax, but no evasion can be eternal, and this he realized as he sat in his place on the Opposition benches during the half-hour of wintry twilight that precedes the turning-on of the lights. He realized it in that half-hour, but the application of the knowledge followed later, when the time came for him to question the government on some point relating to a proposed additional dry-dock at Talkley, the naval base. Then for the first time he knew that the sufferings of the past months could have a visible as well as a hidden side—could disorganize his daily routine as they had already demoralized his will and character.

The thing came upon him with extraordinary lack of preparation. He sat through the twilight with tolerable calm, his nervousness showing only in the occasional lifting of his hand to his collar and the frequent changing of his position; but when the lights were turned on, and he leaned back in his seat with closed eyes, he became conscious of a curious impression—a disturbing idea that through his closed lids he could see the faces on the opposite side of the House, see the rows of eyes, sleepy, interested, or vigilant. Never before had the sensation presented itself, but, once set up, it ran through all his susceptibilities. By an absurd freak of fancy those varying eyes seemed to pierce through his lids, almost through his eyeballs. The cold perspiration that was his daily horror broke out on his forehead; and at the same moment Fraide, his leader, turned, leaned over the back of his seat, and touched his knee.

Chilcote started and opened his eyes. "I—I believe I was dozing," he said, confusedly.

Fraide smiled his dry, kindly smile. "A fatal admission for a member of the Opposition," he said. "But I was looking for you earlier in the day, Chilcote. There is something behind this Persian affair. I believe it to be a mere first move on Russia's part. You big trading people will find it worth watching."

Chilcote shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, I don't know," he said. "I scarcely believe in it. Lakely put a match to the powder, in the St. George's, but 'twill only be a noise and a puff of smoke."

But Fraide did not smile. "What is the feeling down at Wark?" he asked. "Has it awakened any interest?"

"At Wark? Oh, I—I don't quite know. I have been a little out of touch with Wark in the last few weeks. A man has so many private affairs to look to—" He was uneasy under his chief's scrutiny.

Fraide's lips parted as if to make reply, but with a certain dignified reticence he closed them again and turned away.

Chilcote leaned back in his place and furtively passed his hand over his forehead. His mind was possessed by one consideration—the consideration of himself. He glanced down the crowded, lighted House to the big glass doors; he glanced about him at his colleagues, indifferent or interested; then surreptitiously his fingers strayed to his waistcoat-pocket.

Usually he carried his morphia tabloids with him, but to-day by a lapse of memory he had left them at home. He knew this, nevertheless he continued to search, while the need of the drug rushed through him with a sense of physical sickness. He lost hold on the business of the House; unconsciously he half rose from his seat.

The man next him looked up. "Hold your ground, Chilcote," he said. "Rayforth is drying up."

With a wave of relief Chilcote dropped back into his place. Whatever the confusion in his mind, it was evidently not obvious in his face.

Rayforth resumed his seat, there was the usual slight stir and pause, then Salett, the member for Salchester, rose.

With Salett's first words Chilcote's hand again sought his pocket, and again his eyes strayed towards the doors, but Fraide's erect head and stiff back just in front of him held him quiet. With an effort he pulled out his notes and smoothed them nervously; but though his gaze was fixed on the pages, not a line of Blessington's clear writing reached his mind. He glanced at the face of the Speaker, then at the faces on the Treasury Bench, then once more he leaned back in his seat.

The man beside him saw the movement. "Funking the dry-dock?" he whispered, jestingly.

"No"—Chilcote turned to him suddenly—"but I feel beastly—have felt beastly for weeks."

The other looked at him more closely. "Anything wrong?" he asked? It was a novel experience to be confided in by Chilcote.

"Oh, it's the grind—the infernal grind." As he said it, it seemed to him suddenly that his strength gave way. He forgot his companion, his position, everything except the urgent instinct that filled mind and body. Scarcely knowing what he did, he rose and leaned forward to whisper in Fraide's ear.

Fraide was seen to turn, his thin face interested and concerned, then he was seen to nod once or twice in acquiescence, and a moment later Chilcote stepped quietly out of his place.

One or two men spoke to him as he hurried from the House, but he shook them off almost uncivilly, and, making for the nearest exit, hailed a cab.

The drive to Grosvenor Square was a misery. Time after time he changed from one corner of the cab to the other, his acute internal pains prolonged by every delay and increased by every motion. At last, weak in all his limbs, he stepped from the vehicle at his own door.

Entering the house, he instantly mounted the stairs and passed to his own rooms. Opening the bedroom door, he peered in cautiously, then pushed the door wide. The light had been switched on, but the room was empty. With a nervous excitement scarcely to be kept in check, he entered, shut and locked the door, then moved to the wardrobe, and, opening it, drew the tube of tabloids from the shelf.

His hand shook violently as he carried the tube to the table. The strain of the day, the anxiety of the past hours, with their final failure, had found sudden expression. Mixing a larger dose than any he had before allowed himself, he swallowed it hastily, and, walking across the room, threw himself, fully dressed, upon the bed.

CHAPTER IV.

TO those whose sphere lies in the west of London, Fleet Street is little more than a name, and Clifford's Inn a mere dead letter. Yet Clifford's Inn lies as safely stowed away in the shadow of the Law Courts as any grave under a country church wall; it is as green of grass, as gray of stone, as irresponsive to the passing footstep.

Facing the railed-in grass-plot of its little court stood the house in which John Loder had his rooms. Taken at a first glance, the house had the deserted air of an office, inhabited only in the early hours; but, as night fell, lights would be seen to show out, first on one floor, then on another—faint, human beacons unconsciously signalling each other. The rooms Loder inhabited were on the highest floor; and from their windows one might gaze philosophically on the tree-tops, forgetting the uneven pavement and the worn railing that hemmed them round. In the landing outside the rooms his name appeared above his door, but the paint had been soiled by time, and the letters for the most part reduced to shadows; so that, taken in conjunction with the gaunt staircase and bare walls, the place had a cheerless look.

Inside, however, the effect was somewhat mitigated. The room on the right hand, as one entered the small passage that served as hall, was of fair size, though low-ceiled. The paint of the wall-panelling, like the name above the outer door, had long ago been worn to a dirty and nondescript hue, and the floor was innocent of carpet; yet in the middle of the room stood a fine old Cromwell table, and on the plain deal book-shelves and along the mantel-piece were some valuable books—political and historical. There were no curtains on the windows, and a common reading-lamp with a green shade stood on a desk. It was the room of a man with few hobbies and no pleasures—who existed because he was alive, and worked because he must.

Three nights after the great fog John Loder sat by his desk in the light of the green-shaded lamp. The remains of a very frugal supper stood on the centre table, and in the grate a small and economical-looking fire was burning.

Having written for close on two hours, he pushed back his chair and stretched his cramped fingers; then he yawned, rose, and slowly walked across the room. Reaching the mantel-piece, he took a pipe from the pipe-rack and some tobacco from the jar that stood behind the books. His face looked tired and a little worn, as is common with men who have worked long at an uncongenial task. Shredding the tobacco between his hands, he slowly filled the pipe, then lighted it from the fire with a spill of twisted paper.

Almost at the moment that he applied the light the sound of steps mounting the uncarpeted stairs outside caught his attention, and he raised his head to listen.

Presently the steps halted and he heard a match struck. The stranger was evidently uncertain of his whereabouts. Then the steps moved forward again and paused.

An expression of surprise crossed Loder's face, and he laid down his pipe. As the visitor knocked, he walked quietly across the room and opened the door.

The passage outside was dark, and the new-comer drew back before the light from the room.

"Mr. Loder—?" he began, interrogatively. Then all at once he laughed in embarrassed apology. "Forgive me," he said. "The light rather dazzled me. I didn't realize who it was."

Loder recognized the voice as belonging to his acquaintance of the fog.

"Oh, it's you!" he said. "Won't you come in?" His voice was a little cold. This sudden resurrection left him surprised—and not quite pleasantly surprised. He walked back to the fireplace, followed by his guest.

The guest seemed nervous and agitated. "I must apologize for the hour of my visit," he said. "My—my time is not quite my own."

Loder waved his hand. "Whose time is his own?" he said.

Chilcote, encouraged by the remark, drew nearer to the fire. Until this moment he had refrained from looking directly at his host; now, however, he raised his eyes, and, despite his preparation, he recoiled unavoidably before the extraordinary resemblance. Seen here, in the casual surroundings of a badly furnished and crudely lighted room, it was even more astounding than it had been in the mystery of the fog.

"Forgive me," he said again. "It is physical—purely physical. I am bowled over against my will."

Loder smiled. The slight contempt that Chilcote had first inspired rose again, and with it a second feeling less easily defined. The man seemed so unstable, so incapable, yet so grotesquely suggestive to himself.

"The likeness is rather overwhelming," he said; "but not heavy enough to sink under. Come nearer the fire. What brought you here? Curiosity?" There was a wooden arm-chair by the fireplace. He indicated it with a wave of the hand; then turned and took up his smouldering pipe.

Chilcote, watching him furtively, obeyed the gesture and sat down.

"It is extraordinary!" he said, as if unable to dismiss the subject. "It—it is quite extraordinary!"

The other glanced round. "Let's drop it," he said. "It's so confoundedly obvious." Then his tone changed. "Won't you smoke?" he asked.

"Thanks." Chilcote began to fumble for his cigarettes.

But his host forestalled him. Taking a box from the mantel-piece, he held it out.

"My one extravagance!" he said, ironically. "My resources bind me to one; and I think I have made a wise selection. It is about the only vice we haven't to pay for six times over." He glanced sharply at the face so absurdly like his own, then, lighting a fresh spill, offered his guest a light.

Chilcote moistened his cigarette and leaned forward. In the flare of the paper his face looked set and anxious, but Loder saw that the lips did not twitch as they had done on the previous occasion that he had given him a light, and a look of comprehension crossed his eyes.

"What will you drink? Or, rather, will you have a whiskey? I keep nothing else. Hospitality is one of the debarred luxuries."

Chilcote shook his head. "I seldom drink. But don't let that deter you."

Loder smiled. "I have one drink in the twenty-four hours—generally at two o'clock, when my night's work is done. A solitary man has to look where he is going."

"You work till two?"

"Two—or three."

Chilcote's eyes wandered to the desk. "You write?" he asked.

The other nodded curtly.

"Books?" Chilcote's tone was anxious.

Loder laughed, and the bitter note showed in his voice.

"No—not books," he said.

Chilcote leaned back in his chair and passed his hand across his face. The strong wave of satisfaction that the words woke in him was difficult to conceal.

"What is your work?"

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY

JOHN CHILCOTE, member of the House of Commons, is the first man to hurry from his place when parliament adjourns on a January night that is marked by the blackest fog in years and the news of border risings against the Persian government which are branded by

LAKELY, editor of St. George's, as the index of a long-cherished Russian scheme, growing to a gradual maturity under the "drift" policy of the British government. Nervous and high strung, Chilcote refuses a cab and walks. In the dense fog he jostles a stranger. They indulge in good-natured conversation. Then Chilcote strikes a match to light his cigarette. He is amazed to see that the other man is the exact counterpart of himself. They exchange cards, the stranger's revealing him to be

JOHN LODER. On the following morning Chilcote awakens depressed and irritable. He is very disagreeable with his man-servant,

ALLSOPP. Left alone for a few minutes, Chilcote obtains from a wardrobe a glass tube filled with tabloids, and, mixing some whisky, he drops two of the tabloids into the glass and drains the contents. His nervousness is apparently gone, but after breakfast his irritability returns with the arrival of his secretary, BLESSINGTON, who annoys him with political matter. He tells Blessington that he feels like "chucking it all."

"Goodby," he said "take care of yourself." [Guy Bates Post as Chilcote and Marcia Manon as Lady Astrupp.]

Don't make a nasty muss of blowing out your brains; if you want to kill yourself, drink lots of ice water.

LA CRESCENTA VALLEY NOTES OF INTEREST

The dinner and social evening by the Service League of the Community church last Friday evening at the school auditorium was a decided success financially and socially. The proceeds will be used for the building of the new community church on Montrose ave.

Mrs. Tom Minford of Verdugo Knoll, will be hostess at a silver offering tea, next Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 5 to the members of the La Crescenta Woman's club and their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Keifer of Sycamore avenue, were hosts at an informal dancing party, last Saturday evening to a group of young friends of their daughters, Misses Virginia and Dorothy Keifer.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Reynolds of Rosemont avenue were guests of relatives in Los Angeles for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Eyre returned Sunday from a week's stay in Pasadena.

Mrs. Ethelynne Smith was called home from Bakersfield last Saturday on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. B. H. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ohrmund and children were guests of H. A. Baldridge over Sunday.

Ernest Shockley, a former resident of La Crescenta and a World war veteran, passed away at his home in Pasadena last Thursday. Mr. Shockley is a son-in-law of J. L. Bowler, of Los Angeles and Montrose avenue, and is survived by his wife and a young son and daughter.

C. L. Newel, who has been a resident of La Crescenta for many years, passed away in Los Angeles, during the past week.

It takes a lot of rehearsing to make the average man honest.

Foley's Friendly Fancies

JAMES W. FOLEY

THEN AND NOW

When I was just a little boy
And came home after school,
There were, to rob me of my joy,
The chores to do by rule
I had to fill the box with wood
And rake and clean the yard,
Till life seemed, Oh much less than good,
And fate seemed stern and hard.

Yes, life seemed all a tasteless husk,
And not what it should be
Between the four o'clock and dusk,
With chores that busied me.
For there was kindling to be split,
The gentle cow to lead,
And often when I'd think of it
My little heart would bleed.

And day by day and through the year
The same things o'er and o'er,
Till life seemed dull and hard and drear
And just an endless chore.
And then I prayed I might grow tall
And be a man with men,
Without a chore to do at all,
As I was charged with then.

And here I am, grown tall and old,
My boyhood years are through,
And I find there are chores untold
Before me yet to do.
And when the desk is piled up high
With papers now and then
I wish, and heave a weary sigh,
I was a boy again.
